2 Formosan Cities Bombed Earlier

Enemy's Fliers Execute 1st Raid on Empire in Its History.

(Picture on Page 3.)

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Thursday), Feb. 24.—A dozen huge Chinese bombers today were reported by the Japanese News Agency Domei to be following up a raid on the island of Formosa with an air attack launched at the Japanese mainland.

Air raid warnings were sounded in three districts.

The planes were reported flying toward thickly populated Kyushu Island, 750 miles north of Formosa, where Chinese bombs killed eight persons and injured 29 yesterday. The raid was the first in history on any territory of the island empire.

First reports of the attacking squadron came from the defense headquarters at Fukuoka, 500 miles west and south of Tokyo.

Warnings Sounded.

Air raid warnings were sounded throughout north Kyushu, and also in Yamaguchi Province, across the straits from Kyushu.

Nagasaki, Kyushu's principal port with a population of 211,000, was warned of the approaching planes.

The reports said the 12 bombers accompanied by pursuit planes were sighted flying eastward at a high altitude.

It was understood that the report that the planes were winging their way toward Japan came from Hangchow, Japanese-held city 110 miles south of Shanghai.

Raiders would have to cross about 500 miles of Yellow Sea to reach Japan from China.

Eight Killed on Formosa.

Taihoku, the capital of Formosa, near the northern tip of the island, and Shinchiku City, on the western coast, were bombed in yesterday's raid. Three children were reported among 18 persons killed, while 29 were wounded.

Formosa lies approximately 120 miles east of the southeastern coast of China. It was ceded to Japan by China in 1895 as a result of the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894-95 and a vast part of its 5,000,000 inhabitants is racially Chinese.

Dispatches from Hankow said Russian-made planes — numbering from "36 to 70"—flown by pilots of undisclosed nationality, conducted the attacks from a base somewhere on China's southeast coast.

Strike at Air Base.

Chinese reports said 40 Japanese airplanes, two hangars and a gasoline storage plant were destroyed at the Taihoku air base and heavy damage inflicted on strategic points on the western shore of Formosa.

They said the raiders returned unscathed and their attack probably was a "forerunner of similar raids to come."

The raiders struck at the air base on the outskirts of Taihoku at 11 a. m., dropping ten bombs.

Dispatches carried by Domei (Japanese News Agency) said an attack was launched on Chikuto, near Shinchiku City, which was not mentioned in the Formosa government general report.

Domei said ten bombs were dropped on Chikuto, killing several civilians, before Japanese planes took the air and drove the raiders away.

Hungary Offers To Pay Her Debt But No Interest

Proposal Is Turned Over to Treasury Department, Action Delayed.

(Text of Statement on Page 9.)

By Franklyn Waltman.

Hungarian Minister John Pelenyi yesterday revealed that the war debt readjustment proposal which his government made to the United States contemplated payment in full of the amount of the original loan but without interest.

The original principal of the American post-war loan to Hungary was $1,685,000. Since 1924 Hungary has paid this country on account of principal and interest against that loan approximately $478,000. The Hungarian government now proposes that this latter sum be credited against the original sum loaned, leaving a balance of $1,207,000 to be paid in a series of 30 annuities, without interest.

The Hungarian offer was the subject of a White House conference last week when President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull sounded out Vice President John N. Garner, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Pat Harrison and House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton as to the probable Congressional reaction to such a proposal.

Congress Is Hostile.

It is understood that the Congressional leaders advised the President not to propose any war debt settlements to Capitol Hill at this time, asserting the mood of Congress was hostile to any scaling down of the existing debt-funding agreements. Subsequently, the President, without revealing details, said he had discussed war debts at the conference but that no more progress had been made than at any time in the last two years.

This Government, however, has not rejected formally the Hungarian offer, although it may be held in abeyance for the time being. The State Department transmitted the Hungarian proposal to the Treasury Department for its examination and reaction. The Treasury Department has not reported on the offer.

The Hungarian Minister disclosed the background and details of the offer at a special press conference, presumably with State Department's approval. Publication of the details of the offer and the reasons which prompted Hungary to act, it was held in some quarters, might be helpful in winning for it more favorable consideration from the country and Capitol Hill.

Kennedy Leaves For London Post

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, New United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's sailed today on the S. S. Manhattan to take over the London post of the late Ambassador Robert Worth Bingham.

James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt, was at the pier to see him off. Kennedy sailed without his family.

"I'm just a babe thown into the country over there, and I'm going to do the best I can," Kennedy said with a smile.

Mrs. Kennedy and eight of the Ambassador's nine children bade him farewell at the pier. Mrs. Kennedy, recuperating from an illness, will join her husband in England in several weeks.

Also sailing on the Manhattan was Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., Ambassador to Poland, returning to his embassy at Warsaw after a routine report to the State Department.

British Rush Negotiations With Il Duce

Labor Party Demands Issue Be Submitted to Vote Now.

The Crisis in Europe.

Prime Minister Chamberlain today was drafting a statement of what Great Britain wants from Fascist Italy as he carries out his new policy of negotiation, which led Capt. Anthony Eden to quit the cabinet. The Labor Party demanded a general election on the policy.

Austria imposed stringent restrictions upon the Nazis and Chancellor Schuschnigg prepared to explain his dealings with Hitler to the Austrian Diet.

As the ring of Nazi influence tightened around Czechoslovakia, the army's chief of staff said the republic is prepared to defend itself, without awaiting outside help, if it suffers the "brutally sudden" attack it fears.—Page 7.

British Draft Pact.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 23.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his Edenless cabinet today got down to drafting the terms for negotiations with Italy.

They were thoroughly aware of a growing peril to the coalition government if they failed to match Premier Mussolini's famous ability as a bargainer.

Chamberlain's new "talk with dictators" policy and the resulting resignation of Anthony Eden as foreign secretary brought from the Labor Party and trades union council a challenge that the government submit the issue to an immediate general election.

The government now has more than double the strength of the opposition in the House of Commons and a laborite censure motion was defeated last night by 330 votes to 168.

As Chamberlain and his colleagues worked on instructions for Lord Perth, British ambassador to Italy, for the Anglo-Italian talks in Rome, political circles forecast an early approach to Germany on the lines of the bid for an understanding with Italy.

Roosevelt Back, Plans Conference On Europe Crisis

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House last night from a visit to Hyde Park, N. Y. He was met by his son and secretary, James.

Early conferences were expected on the major political changes in Europe that developed during his absence.

He also planned the usual talks with Congressional leaders that occur after his trips away from the Capital.

Before leaving Hyde Park the Chief Executive nominated nine high Army officers for promotion, including new chiefs of Cavalry and Field Artillery and a new adjutant general.

'Candidate' McNutt Shakes 3,141 Hands

Lavish 3-Hour Reception for Indiana's Favorite Son Is Unprecedented; Horde of Congressmen and Officials Rush to Hail Him.

By Sidney Olson.

Three thousand, one hundred and forty-one hungry citizens shook hands yesterday with a man modestly described by his friends as "the next President of the United States."

They passed on hurriedly and stripped to a wreckage of crumbs one of the most spectacular free luncheses ever set forth in this city of political gratis provender.

To the merry clatter of teaspoons and hundreds of cocktail glasses bumped together in toasts "to 1940," and to the champing noises of thousands of jaws working on vol-au-vent fin de siecle [chicken patties], the Paul V. McNutt bandwagon rolled away yesterday afternoon.

"I am not a candidate for any office," smiled the snow-crested, 48-year-old High Commissioner for the Philippine Islands.

"He's tall, tan and terrific," said two pretty little stenographers who vainly tried for three hours to get their pictures taken with the former Indiana Governor.

"All I want is the Easter egg-rolling concession," said William Kunkel, publisher of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette.

"Paul McNutt is a fine man and I have many friends in Indiana," said Attorney General Homer Cummings, who fought off a cold which had confined him to his home for several days, in order to attend.

"Too bad Fred didn't show up," said Senator Sherman Minton

Business Urges Income Levy As Lesser Evil

D.C. Spokesmen Reluctantly Make Choice Before House Hearing.

By James D. Secrest.

Spokesmen for Washington businessmen yesterday reluctantly admitted to the House sub-committee on fiscal relations that if forced to choose between the business privilege tax and an income levy they would take the latter.

The preference was expressed, however, only under persistent questioning by committee members and the answer was hedged with many conditions and the statement in each instance that the spokesman was stating only his personal opinion.

The witnesses, during an all-day hearing on the pending District tax bill, all agreed, if additional taxes are necessary, the sales tax is the solution.

Only Edward F. Colladay, president of the Washington Board of Trade, suggested a partial alternative. That was to raise the real estate tax to $1.60 and add a levy on beer.

Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, after the hearing, predicted that the committee will insert a tax on beer.

"The old argument that beer should be exempt from taxation because it is a poor man's drink has proved false," he said, noting that beer is no cheaper here than in States that have beer taxes.

Colladay estimated that between $200,000 and $300,000 could be raised

Senate Group Approves Wide Prices Inquiry

Soft Coal Commission Revokes Minimum Rate Schedules.

Coincident with Senate committee approval of a sweeping price investigation, the National Bituminous Coal Commission yesterday voted to revoke its minimum soft coal price schedules and marketing rules and regulations.

Senate investigation into "costs, prices and profits of the principal commodities of our commerce" was asked at a special meeting of the Senate Commerce Committee.

The committee ordered a favorable report on a resolution by Senato Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina. Bailey said he wanted the Senate to look into "reports that commercial organizations trusts and monopolies are demanding prices of consumers that are unjust and calculated to retard distribution and consumption, and are paying prices for raw materials that discourage production."

In voting to suspend Nation-wide schedules of soft coal minimum prices, effective at midnight tomorrow, the Bituminous Coal Commission, faced with increasing litigation, acted on advice of both producers and labor unions.

"It is the judgment of this commission that the public interest will best be served by a revocation of the minimum prices and marketing rules and regulations, this to be followed by the re-establishment of such prices and regulations as promptly as can be done and in such manner as to avoid, wherever possible, technical objections which have been interposed by the consumers' counsel and others," read a

Cardozo Gains in Fight For Life, Friends Say

Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo has made gradual though almost imperceptible gains in his fight against a heart condition that several weeks ago gave rise to fears for his life, persons close to the 67-year-old jurist said last night.

"There has been a gradual though scarcely noticeable improvement in the justice's condition," one source said, while his physician, Dr. John Paul Ernest, jr., described the state of his illness as "practically unchanged." Justice Cardozo has been ill since December 10.

Austria Bans Nazi Uniforms, Curbs Greeting of 'Heil Hitler'

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 23.—Austria laid down a set of rigid restrictions on Nazi activities tonight on the eve of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's speech explaining his side of the new Austro-German agreement.

The new order, issued by the department of security, banned the wearing of Nazi insignia and Nazi uniforms, prohibited Nazi Party activity and limited the use of Nazi songs and the greeting "Heil Hitler."

"Heil Hitler" would be tolerated, the order said, only if spoken without intent to political demonstration, and Nazi songs were forbidden except on occasions approved by the Fatherland Front.

The flag law was unchanged, which means the swastika flag may be displayed in hotels by German citizens, but only beside an Austrian flag of equal size.

The decree brought disappointment to the Nazis, particularly because it came from the security department, which is controlled by Arthur Seyss-Inquart, new minister friendly to Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

A brisk challenge to the Nazis was voiced by Vienna's Roman

House Now Must Act on Minor Changes in Appropriation.

$250,000,000 Fund to Be Used to Increase WPA Payroll.

By Robert C. Albright.

Immediate employment of 500,000 additional WPA workers to partially take up the jobless slack was authorized yesterday by overwelming Senate aproval of a $250,000,000 deficiency relief appropriation.

The vote was 67 to 1. Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, cast the lone "no" ballot, after the Senate flatly turned down his amendment for increased local relief responsibility.

The House previously had approved the emergency fund, but must pass on relatively minor Senate changes before the bill goes to the White House. Speedy concurrence was expected to enable WPA to deal with an increasing relief load.

1,300,000 Lose Jobs.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins estimated that 1,300,000 non-agricultural workers lost their jobs between the middle of December and mid-January.

Aubrey Williams, deputy Works Progress administrator, will step up WPA rolls from 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 as soon as the new money is available. They will be held at this level through March. During the latter spring months, rolls will be cut to 2,400,000 in April, 2,300,000 in May, and 2,200,000 in June.

The emergency relief resolution was the first of the log jam of legislation behind the now broken anti-lynching bill filibuster to win through to Senate passage. The $1,412,069,465 independent offices bill was immediately made the unfinished business, and may be passed today.

New Squabble Due.

Tomorrow the Senate will head into another major controversy, when Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, moves to call up the Administration's omnibus reorganization bill.

Doctors Announce 'Acute Damage' to Pershing's Heart

Tuscon, Ariz., Feb. 23 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing's physicians disclosed late today the aging World War commander "has suffered acute damage to his heart muscles which will require prolonged rest in bed."

He is in no immediate danger, said Dr. Roland Davison, unless there is "a sudden change."

"The rheumatism is minor," Dr. Davison continued. "The heart is the important matter. The present illness is due partly to his age and partly because he is a man who has always overdone himself because the people of the United States made great demands on him."

The physicians said they would hold another consultation later tonight.

A cardiette, a machine for measuring electrical reactions of the heart, showed "a very favorable record," the physician reported. The general ate a hearty lunch and was "perfectly comfortable" after a quiet day.

Rep. Parsons and His Accuser Held for Trial in Hit-Run Case

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Representative Claude V. Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois, was ordered held on charges of leaving after colliding yesterday following a four-hour hearing in the Police Court corporation counsel's office. No bond was required and he agreed to appear for arraignment next Thursday.

At the same time, Albert D. Nesbitt, Cleveland attorney, who figured in Saturday's collision with the Congressional car, was cited to answer charges of pulling from the curb without a proper hand signal.

Charges of a "frame-up" were hurled by Representative Parsons and his attorney, Arch Shipe, in the stormy cross-fire of questions and answers. Conflicting testimony drew heated debate from opposing counsel as the lengthy hearing concluded.

Two assistant corporation counsels were assigned to hear the case—George D. Neilson and Matt Mahorner, jr. Their decision to hold Parsons on the serious traffic charge was assailed by his attorney.

Nearly a dozen witnesses told of the crash near Connecticut avenue and Calvert street and the subse-

Dead Pensioned, Oklahoma May Lose Federal Aid

Social Security Board's Auditors Testify to Irregularities.

Inquiry Is Hinted For Other States

Number of Aged on Rolls Over Eligible Total, Director Claims.

Instances of loose administration of Oklahoma's old-age pension plan that included payment of benefits to dead men, a pensioner who employed a butler and payments to the mother of a $14,000 major league ball player last night gave officials of the Social Security Board cause to consider discontinuance of Federal contributions to the State's needy aged.

The manner in which Oklahoma has administered a State-Federal system designed specifically to aid only needy persons over 65 years of age was laid before the board by its investigators at a hearing yesterday. Frank J. Bane, board director, last night told The Post the board's investigation of the conduct of State administrators would be spread to "three or four" additional States, but he declined to name them.

Charges Are Detailed.

Some of the charges which, Bane said, "made it apparent there are many people receiving benefits in Oklahoma who have no right to them while many of those in need of assistance are being denied it," were:

In three counties more persons were receiving old-age pension checks than the estimated population over 65 years old.

In 19 counties the number of pensioners on the rolls totaled more than 75 per cent of the estimated population over 65. Officials of the board said the figure was "way above" the percentage relationship of persons over 65 to the entire population.

Dead Men on Rolls.

James G. Tucker, board auditor, testified to the presence of dead men on the pension rolls. He said board investigators found 160 such cases. Furthermore, he said, benefits were being received in 122 cases in which no applications were on file.

Tucker said board investigators so far had gone into only 46 of the State's 77 counties. Bane told reporters the investigation eventually would cover the entire State. Tucker charged that more than 2,000 persons were being carried as pensioners who have incomes over $30 a month.

Pensioner Has Butler.

Jane M. Hooey, director of the board's bureau of public assistance, was responsible for revelation of the pensioner's butler. She said the servant received a board investigator when he called at the pensioner's home. As for the high-salaried ball player, she quoted him as saying his mother's upkeep was not his responsibility.

Most Oklahoma Congressmen attended today's hearing and several times asked the board's investigators to clarify statements.

Representative Smith (Democrat) walked out in a huff after Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer refused to allow him to cross-examine one of the investigators.

Altmeyer suggested that Smith wait until State officials had replied to the charges and had cross-examined the witnesses.

"What's the use of a Congressman attending?" Smith, a former Townsendite, replied—and walked out.

Later Smith told reporters he would ask for a Congressional investigation of the entire Social Security administration. He called

THOMAS PARRAN, Jr.

Senators Vote $9,000,000 for Venereal Drive

Commerce Unit Approves Epochal Plan for State Aid.

Warning that "this war must be fought on 48 fronts,' the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday approved an epochal bill authorizing appropriation of $9,000,000 for a Nation-wide crusade against syphilis and gonorrhea.

The measure, introduced by Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and earnestly recommended by experts at hearings last week, would bulwark and expand the venereal disease program initiated by Dr. Thomas Parran shortly after he became surgeon general of the Public Health Service in April, 1936.

When the bill was submitted to the full committee yesterday by Chairman Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, and Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, the subcommittee on drafting of a report, it carried authorization for allotment of $271,000,000 in Federal funds over a 13-year period.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, objected, however, to the proposed appropriation of $12,000,000 in 1941 and $25,000,000 for each of the ten following years on the ground that Congress cannot foresee what needs will be so far in advance. Accordingly, the bill was amended to authorize $3,000,000 for the year beginning next July 1 and $6,000,000 for the one following.

7-Point Plan To Aid Workers Of 45 Weighed

Miss Perkins Sets Program at Parley to Improve Their Status.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday outlined a seven-point program to improve the industrial status of workers over 45 years old, before a committee representing industry, labor, and the public.

The group met for the first time yesterday, with Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, as chairman. It will continue the conference today.

Chase said that the first session had centered on a double problem of education: first teaching the worker that he is not through when he reaches 45, and second; teaching the employer that the worker retains his skill and his right to a place in industry after this age.

Massachusetts Cited.

Secretary Perkins, striking at this problem, declared that Massachusetts was the only State which had attempted to aid the older worker by legislation, forbidding discrimination against the worker because of his age.

Besides legislation, she offered the following suggestions:

Educate the worker to protect himself by acquiring more skill, by better guarding his health, by union membership and by finding a steady occupation.

Break down the prejudice of employers against older workers.

Adjust systems of workmen's compensation, group insurance, and pensions, so that they do not operate against employment of older workers.

Preference for Age.

Give preference to older workers on Federal, State and municipal public works.

Modify the civil service laws.

Secretary Perkins declared that available studies of the older industrial workers had failed to disclose how different age groups varied in productivity in various industries, or to show whether compensation costs for older workers were greater because the workers were slow to recover from injury or less because the older workers were more careful. In addition, she declared it had not been shown how group life insurance or pension costs affected hiring policies.

Chairman Chase said labor records showed that men over the age of 40 made up 43 per cent of the job-seekers on the rolls of the U. S. Employment Service in the last six months of last year. Against this figure, he pointed out that only 30 per cent of those who found jobs through the employment service were over 40.

"The report showed a larger proportion of these placements were of only temporary duration, one month or less, than was true of younger men. Women over 40 were at a disadvantage, as compared with younger workers, the report showed."

McNutt's Presidential Boom Tests Value of Clown Type of Political Publicity.

By Franklyn Waltman

Antics of Paul Vories McNutt and his Indiana friends in their efforts to boom the former Hoosier Governor as a Presidential candidate again raises the question whether all publicity for political aspirants is good publicity. That is to say, does all publicity, no matter how unfavorable, critical or satirical—in the absence of moral delinquency, of course—benefit the subject? Conversely, can the prospects of a political aspirant be killed by heaping ridicule on him?

WALTMAN.

In the folklore of American politics it is taken for granted that "all publicity is good publicity." The average member of Congress, for instance, cares not what you say about him, just so long as you use his name—and spell it correctly. Few politicians subscribe to the old admonition that—"If you cannot say something good about me, say nothing." The motto of the majority is "say something good about me if you can, but anyway, say something. Above all else politicians dread a conspiracy of silence regarding them.

Persons outside of the newspaper craft frequently express amazement over the friendly relations which exist between political writers and public men they have severely criticized or ridiculed. The explanation is that men in public life regard publicity as as necessary as the air they breathe. While they prefer to be praised, they do not object to being denounced so long as they are kept in the spotlight. Indeed, the earmark of an amateur in politics is an expression of resentment over criticism. The veterans take it in their stride.

The widespread belief of political practitioners in the necessity for publicity, favorable or adverse, is responsible for much of the clowning which takes place on Capitol Hill and in state legislatures. It is at the bottom of much of the demogoguery so prevalent in American politics and the projection of so many screwy proposals.

In the daily rush of news about this complicated, rapidly-changing world, only the unusual, the spectacular and the importantly significant events can compete for the front page. Since few men have achieved a prestige which gives important significance to their utterances and actions, the only way open to the large majority of politicians to capture front page publicity is to do or say something colorful and spectacular, make extreme statements or cause shock by resorting to the unconventional.

Thus, the late Huey P. Long within several years became the best-known member of the Senate by constantly clowning. In the year or two prior to his death more tourists to Senate galleries asked to have the Louisiana "Kingfish" pointed out to them than any other Senator—or any two or three other Senators. Representative Maury Maverick, by clowning and doing the unusual, is better known than many members of the House who have been in that body two or three times as long.

But does the publicity these and men like them receive, much of it heaping ridicule on them, really benefit them in the long run? It is a question to which no conclusive answer has yet been found. It is a task for the new scientific group of probers into public opinion. The derisive publicity given to Huey Long did not appear to hurt him with his Louisiana constituents. His assassination prevented a determination whether such publicity would have made him a figure of national importance. Had he lived through 1936, we might have had a conclusive test.

Senator Theodore G. ("The Man") Bilbo for years has sought publicity through stunts which have caused him to be ridiculed, but without any visible effects on his popularity in Mississippi. It is true that the clownish Tom Heflin finally went down to defeat in Alabama. But the real reason was his bolt of the Democratic Party in 1928, not the fact that he sought publicity which caused him to be satirized.

Recent illustrations of what is being discussed here were the speeches, blaming monopolistic practices and a sit-down strike of capital for the recession, delivered last December by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. We do not mean that Mr. Jackson is given to clowning. On the contrary he is a very serious, sober-minded and able official. But in those speeches he reached for publicity by making extreme, if not indefensible, statements.

What was the result? For months Mr. Jackson had been an unavowed candidate for Governor of New York. He also had been making speeches, dozens of them, criticizing monopolistic practices and urging that something be done about the tax laws. Comparatively little attention was paid to him. Usually newspapers buried his speeches deep inside and away from Washington not one person in ten could have told you who Robert H. Jackson was.

Then he made the slashing attack on big business, on the "sixty families" and on capital. He got on every front page in the country. The columnists and editorial writers denounced him, pointed out the errors in his reasoning, assailed him as "Red Herring" Jackson. Was he crushed? He was not. The news reels put him in every motion picture theater. Radio commentators talked about him nightly. Magazines carried his photograph on their covers. He was interviewed. He was invited to make speeches in all sections of the country. His name became a household word, a topic of conversation on the street car. Most adults now know who he is, even if some Senators confuse him with another Jackson.

Undoubtedly Mr. Jackson's publicity following his speeches was adverse, although he later received favorable publicity. But it does not seem to have hurt him. Since then he has been named Solicitor General. His prospects for the Governorship of New York are no worse than they were in December. Indeed, it may be argued they are better because he is better known.

The point of all this is that the McNutt boom for the Presidency, based as it is on a clowning-for-publicity build-up, affords a test of the politically-honored axiom that "all publicity is good publicity." Ridicule has been poured on Mr. McNutt in recent days. Whenever his name is mentioned here it evokes smiles and laughter. But he is getting the publicity which is the objective of his friends. Most newspaper readers now know he is a candidate for the Presidency. Will such antics kill whatever chances he had—or will he get away with it? It is a clinical case for the public opinion scientists.

U.S. War Games To Be Carried Out in Secret

Swanson Bars News Men From Naval Maneuvers in Pacific.

The six-week simulated warfare of the United States Navy in the Pacific from mid-March until the end of April will be carried out in secrecy so far as the American public is concerned.

The decision to bar newspaper men was said to have been reached by Secretary of the Navy Swanson after conferences with Admiral William D. Leahy, ranking officer of the sea service and the fleet commander in chief, Admiral Claud C. Bloch.

The only explanation offered was that fleet Problem No. 19, which will be worked out in the maneuvers, is highly confidential. The war games will send 15 fighting craft cruising over a 12,000-square-mile area from Alaska to Samoa and the Panama Canal. But the public information will be limited to what reporters learn in interviews with Admiral Bloch before and after the maneuvers.

Other Developments.

Other developments yesterday in the national defense problem were:

Secretary Swanson asked the House Judiciary Committee to approve as a defense measure the Nye resolution calling for the United States to take title to submerged coastal oil lands.

Three departments of the government—Army, Navy and the Treasury—opposed a bill sponsored by Senator Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, to draft the Nation's wealth in time of war.

Representative Ralph E. Church (Republican), Illinois, announced he would request the House Naval Affairs Committee today to subpena leading airplane manufacturers and technical authorities for information regarding the relative strength of bombing planes and battleships before the committee acts on the $800,000,000 naval expansion bill.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, charged the Administration had information, which it refused to divulge, tending to prove that battleships and other surface craft are easily rendered ineffective by bombing planes. The charges were promptly denied by high-ranking officers of the War and Navy Departments.

Lester P. Barlow, aerial bomb inventor, said in a letter to Representative Church that Glenn L. Martin, president of the Martin Airplane Manufacturing Co., would sustain him in his testimony that the use of Barlow's new type of aerial mine would make battleships practically obsolete.

Nye Plan Opposed.

The Nye resolution for Government acquisition of coastal oil resources between the shore and the three-mile limit was opposed before the House Judiciary Committee by Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie, of Louisiana, and his assistant, Joseph A. Loret.

Porterie said it was impossible to estimate the potential value of oil deposits between the Louisiana coast and the three-mile limit, and expressed the fear that should the Government expropriate them the State would lose valuable revenue. He said "the next step might be to take over the State's mineral rights over navigable streams."

Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said he would put Representative Church's proposal to call civilian authorities to a committee vote but doubted it was necessary to take such action. Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will testify before the committee tomorrow, and Vinson said he thought the admiral could answer all questions.

Walsh Opposes $5,000 Pension for President Harrison's Widow as 'Unwarranted.'

A proposed $5,000 annual pension for the widow of President Harrison was opposed yesterday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, as "entirely unwarranted."

Walsh made his statement in a minority report protesting the recommendation of the Senate Pensions Committee for favorable action on the proposal. Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison, of New York, stated Walsh, has a $5,000 annual income from a $100,000 estate established for her by President Harrison and "never shared the burdens of official life" with him, since she was married to Harrison three years after he left the White House.

Mrs. Harrison will be 80 on April 30. Eight Presidents' widows have received pensions since the policy was initiated in 1882, when a $5,000 annuity was granted to the widow of President Tyler.

New hearings are being sought on two bills now before the House Roads Committee which would establish a system of super-highways criss-crossing the Nation from east to west and north and south. The proposals, calling for expenditure of $8,000,000,000, were advanced by Representatives Snyder and Randolph, both Democrats, of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, respectively. A similar measure has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, who conferred with President Roosevelt before acting.

The Senate by unanimous consent yesterday confirmed Max O'Rell Truitt as a member of the Maritime Commission, to serve out the term of Joseph P. Kennedy, now Ambassador to the Court of St. James. Unanimous consent dispensed with the usual day's wait after approval by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, returned yesterday from his honeymoon with one unhappy memory. The unpleasantness, he said, was over the Bahama Islands which he and Mrs. Smathers visited. "When I saw them (the islands) and realized they were British possessions I got a bad taste in the mouth," he declared.

The Senator said he would demand that Great Britain pay her war debt or give the Bahamas to the United States. He also wanted it understood that the honeymoon trip was to Florida and the visit to Nassau only a minor excursion.

The House was warned yesterday by Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, of the House Immigration Committee, that the contemplated $1,000,000,000 national defense program would be wasted unless espionage by un-American groups was curbed.

Gov. Chandler Comes Out for Barkley's Seat

'Happy' Says He'll Not Make Roosevelt, New Deal an Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, Ky., Feb. 23.—Gov. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky formally announced tonight his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate seat of Alben W. Barkley, of Paducah, Senate majority leader.

At the annual banquet of the Campbell County Chamber of Commerce the Governor indicated he would seek to confine the campaign to State issues and the records of himself and Senator Barkley, and would not make President Roosevelt and the New Deal an issue.

"I am President Roosevelt's friend," he said. "President Roosevelt hasn't had any trouble in Kentucky since I've been Governor."

Chandler implied, however, that he would not hesitate to attack the President if the latter undertook to interfere in the Kentucky campaign in Barkley's behalf.

The Governor announced selection of Brady Stewart, county judge of McCracken County, Barkley's home, as his State campaign manager. Stewart managed Chandler's gubernatorial campaign in McCracken County in 1935.

The Governor sharply criticized Barkley, referring to him as "a stranger to the State" and a man who "has given Kentucky the absent treatment." He promised that if elected he would "represent Kentuckians."

The agreement was announced after a three-hour conference.

Company and union negotiators said the contract was the same as one in force during the year, except that it provided for conferences if changes are proposed.

J. & L.'s agreement is similar to one accorded by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and other U. S. Steel subsidiaries except that it grants exclusive bargaining rights to the S. W. O. C.

Parker Gilbert Dead; Partner Of J. P. Morgan

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—S. Parker Gilbert, partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., and former agent general for reparations, died at the Doctors' Hospital today. An announcement from the Morgan offices said death was caused by cardio-nephristis.

Gilbert was born at Bloomfield, N. J., October 13, 1892, and graduated from Harvard in 1915. He was agent general for reparations payments from Germany from October 30, 1924, to May 17, 1930. He had been a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co. since January 2, 1931.

Gilbert was one of the youngest men to occupy a position of influence in the financial district.

Tall and impressive in appearance, he made friends quickly, and the suave way in which he was able to handle men and difficult situations was in large part responsible for his spectacular rise.

After practising law for three years after his graduation from Harvard Law School, Gilbert went to the United States Treasury Department in 1918, during the World War, as counsel in war loan matters.

Became Treasury Aid.

Such was his success in this difficult and hectic field that in two years he became Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of fiscal affairs, and, in 1921, Undersecretary of the Treasury—before he had reached the age of 30.

After two more years he associated himself with a leading Wall Street firm then known as Cravath, Henderson & De Gersdorff.

Among those with whom he had had extensive personal contact during this period were the late Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Melon, and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

In the fall of 1924, he arrived quietly in Berlin to take over what some experts predicted would be a hopeless job—agent general for reparations under the Dawes Plan. It was his job to extract from Germany the huge amounts she had been assessed by victorious nations after the war, and apportion them amongst the powers. He had to do this without crippling Germany, without upsetting international financial equilibrium.

Made Many Friends

At that time, Gilbert was just 32. As extra jobs during that period, he undertook to be chairman of the co-ordinating board, chairman of the transfer committee, chairman of the trustees of the general external loan of 1924.

Such was his tact that he made many friends in Germany during this period. He was exceedingly modest, and while he liked to talk of the Dawes plan, journalists found him silent to any personal questions. He resigned in 1930 and the following year became a Morgan partner.

Gilbert's few friendships became fast ones. He was a Southampton neighbor of Mellon when the latter passed away. He was deeply moved.

Mr. Gilbert was named a trustee of the Mellon Gallery by the Smithsonian Institution on June 24, last year. His term was to have expired July 1, 1941.

He was a director of Bankers Trust Co., Braden Copper Co., Kennecott Copper Co., Lehigh Valley Coal Corporation and Lehigh Valley Sales Co.

Won World Orders.

He was a member of the New York bar, Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Phi, Century, Metropolitan, University, Harvard, City, Midday, India House and River clubs, of New York; Meadow, in Southampton; Creek, in Locust Valley; Chevy Chase, in Washington, and Union Interallie in Paris. He maintained homes at 30 Sutton place, Manhattan, and at Locust Valley. International orders included grand officer of the Legion of Honor, of France; grand officer of the Order of Leopold, of Belgium; grand officer of the Order of SS. Maurizio and Lazzaro, of Italy.

Statuary Hall Receives Its First Bronze Honoring an Educator

Gen. Beadle, of South Dakota, Marked as One Who Saved 20,000,000 Acres of Land in Northwest for School Children.

Statuary Hall, in which each State is entitled to place two sculptured figures of its greatest citizens, yesterday received its first statue of a man honored mostly for services to schools and education.

It was of Gen. William Henry Harrison Beadle, of South Dakota, who "saved 20,000,000 acres of land for schools of the Northwest" and who is the first Dakotan to be placed in the hall.

Vice President Garner formally accepted the statue, which was presented by Gov. Leslie Jensen.

"You can depend upon it that it is in safe hands, for this Capitol will last—I hope—as long as that bronze," the Vice President said.

The statue is a bronze replica of one standing in the South Dakota capitol at Pierre. It bears the following inscription: Brig. Gen. W. H. H. Beadle, 1831-1915, Educator, Conservationist, Statesman and Soldier. Through his leadership 20,000,000 acres of schools lands were saved to posterity in South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Idaho and Wyoming. Presented to South Dakota and the United States by the teachers and children of South Dakota. 1938."

W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General and head of the South Dakota Society in Washington, presided at the presentation ceremonies. Speeches covering the long career of Gen. Beadle were made by Senators W. J. Bulow and Herbert F. Hitchcock, of South Dakota; Representatives Fred H. Hildebrandt and Francis Case, of South Dakota, and Barrett Lowe, president of the South Dakota Education Association, which Gen. Beadle founded.

Mary Elizabeth Beadle, of the District of Columbia, a niece of the educator, assisted in the unveiling.

A group of Indians in native costume attended the ceremonies, which were preceded by a luncheon of the South Dakota Society and followed by a dramatization of the life of Gen. Beadle presented over the red network of the National Broadcasting Co., under auspices of the National Education Association.

Those who will meet with the President, the newspaper said, are United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey, State Chairman David L. Lawrence, J. David Stern, Philadelphia publisher, and Matthew H. McCloskey, jr., an associate of John B. Kelly, Philadelphia Democratic city chairman.

Street Extensions Asked in Ballston

Extension of two streets in Arlington County was urged last night in a mass meeting of 150 residents of Ballston and vicinity, at the Ballston Firehouse.

Hitler Is Called 'Anti-Christ' by Ex-Reich Official

New York, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Adolf Hitler tonight was accused of being an "anti-Christ . . . who has betrayed the lasting interests of the German fatherland" in a speech before the Federal Council of Churches by Dr. Ernst W. Meyer, former secretary of the German Embassy at Washington.

Dr. Meyer, who resigned his post last May after disagreement with Hitler over Nazi policies, declared there are "millions of German men and women" who disagree with Hitler's policies and even regard them as "anti-German."

Entire Village Flees to Hills As Floods Rise

By the Associated Press.

Fulton, Ark., Feb. 23.—The flooded Red River gained on workmen fighting to save the levee here tonight and this town's 593 residents fled to the hills.

Army engineers anounced they would not guarantee to hold the levee after dark. At noon the river was 11.5 feet above flood stage, and was mounting.

Already four levees near Index, 20 miles west of Fulton, and one levee on the south side of the river, across from the town, have collapsed.

Meanwhile, in east central Arkansas, three levies on the lower White River broke near Cotton Plant.

The Cache River, tributary of the White, added to seriousness of the situation by flooding virtually all territory between it and the White from Cotton Plant to Clarendon, where the two meet.

Warrants Issued For 3 in Virginia Baby's Kidnaping

Baltimore, Feb. 23 (AP).—United States Commissioner James K. Cullen issued warrants today charging three persons with kidnaping 18-month-old Nelson Booth by illegally transporting him from Paxton, Va., to Henderson, N. C., "for reward or otherwise."

The three named are Elizabeth Childress, Mrs. Clyde Childress and Henry C. Esteppe. Cullen will hold a hearing tomorrow to decide whether they shall be taken back to Virginia.

The trio, held since Monday in the Rockville, Md., jail, will be brought here by United States deputy marshals tomorrow for the hearing.

Montgomery County police said three persons, picked up in a cabin near Quince Orchard, Md., gave their names as Harry Esteppe, of Gordonsville, Va., his wife, Elizabeth Esteppe, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Lee, 41, of Danville.

The baby was found in the cabin. Mrs. Lee said the mother of the child, Mrs. Lorine Booth, gave her the baby "because she didn't want him."

Dead Given Aid In Oklahoma, U.S. Board Says

Pensions

the present hearing a "kangaroo court proceeding."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, opened the hearing with a plea for Oklahoma's "old folks." The State, he said, was in "bad shape" because of depression and drought.

"I do not blame the aged people who are hungry, cold and homeless for trying to get some assistance," he added.

After expressing hope that "this hearing will not develop into a political contest," Thomas said he also hoped the board would work out some way to continue pensions for all those now receiving them.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security Board chairman, said that neither Senator Thomas nor any other Congressman had put any pressure on the board and that the Oklahoma Congressional delegation was to be commended for its attitude.

When the board started to present its case, Representative Boren (Democrat), Oklahoma, broke in to say that "the old people of Oklahoma ought to be made an exhibit," since it was in their interest that the social security act was passed.

Altmeyer asked Boren if there were any practical way of doing that, and Boren replied that he wanted the record to show their interests. Shortly thereafter he left the hearing.

Senator Lee and Representatives Massingale, Smith and Disney, all Democrats, also attended the hearing.

Bane told The Post last night that it was "evident" Oklahoma's pension administration has been "inefficient, regardless of the motive." "All the board is interested in," he said, "is to determine whether the State shall continue to receive assistance on the dollar for dollar basis provided in the law.

"The law requires us to insure administration in a manner to provide an efficient and economic service to all persons involved. That is the major point at issue in this hearing."

Fraud Not Involved.

He added that there was no question of fraud involved in the investigation and that if instances of fraud are developed it could not be the business of the board to take action.

As further instances of inefficiency in administration, Rose J. McHugh, one of the board's investigators and a witness at the hearing, cited instances in which orders were issued through bulletins which local administrators were unable to understand because of their language and frequent changes in policy. She called attention to five changes in policy regarding pensions for aged with relatives.

Miss McHugh charged the State administrative agency, the Oklahoma State Welfare Commission, with failing "to assume proper responsibility for carrying out the program."

When the plan first went into effect, Miss McHugh said, the State board decided that an aged person was ineligible for a pension if he had been dependent on relatives in the past.

Some time later, she said, local administrators were allowed to determine whether individual aged persons should get pensions under a rule that "no one would suffer."

Miss McHugh also told the board that the State commission had been unable to build up a satisfactory staff of welfare workers because it had no merit system and that statements of commissioners tended to discourage anyone from thinking he could get a permanent job on the staff.

Tucker traced the history of Oklahoma pension administration under what he called the "old plan" and the "new plan," the latter administered by the commission since August, 1936, under amendments to the State pension law adopted by the Legislature. According to board officials, changes in the earlier law were not made at suggestion of the Federal Government.

Eligibility Checked.

Tucker told the hearing that the new commission had taken over 30,000 cases from the "old plan" administration and was still checking the eligibility of these pensioners, though it has been in control for nearly two years.

The audit, he said, showed that 407 persons under 65 years old received pensions under the old plan, and 190 under the new. Case files were missing for 1,166 pensioners under the old plan and 306 under the new, he asserted. The age of the pensioners, he said, was not properly determined in 868 old plan and 1,438 new-plan cases.

Alexandria Hits Rosenberg's Bill

The city council of Alexandria last night went on record as unanimously opposing the bill introduced in the Virginia Legislature by the Alexandria delegate, Maurice Rosenberg, which would amend the city charter to make the offices of city attorney and city collector elective.

The bill also would fix the salaries of these officials. There was not a dissenting vote to the council's opposition.

President of the council, Mayor Richard L. Ruffner, was instructed to telegraph the chairman of the legislative committee handling the matter in Richmond in protest, and also to wire State Senator John W. Rust, advising him of the council's action.

Both offices are filled by council appointment now. It was charged that the pending measure introduced by Rosenberg would be another step toward "undermining council management form of government and substituting a hybrid form."

Representative Denies Leaving Scene of Accident

Post Staff Photos.

quent chase through Rock Creek Park, with Nesbitt and his sister, Margaret Ellis, of 2603 Connecticut avenue, trailing the legislator's car at speeds varying between 40 and 60 miles an hour.

By his own admission, Parsons left the accident scene without giving his name. He said he "intended" to report the incident to police Monday.

Dispute Over Time.

Although Nesbitt, who was driving his sister's car, claimed he looked into the street twice and saw no other car approaching, Parsons said he was forced to swerve into the center of the avenue to avoid a collision when Nesbitt pulled suddenly in front of him.

There was no exchange of names by either party concerned, it was testified. Parsons said he did not ask for Nesbitt's name but learned it by listening to conversation and noted the tag number on his car.

Several witnesses said the lawmaker remained at the scene less than two minutes. Parsons, however, contended it was five minutes before he drove away. He said he did not make known his identity and had planned to turn the whole affair over to his insurance company for settlement.

Parsons Led Chase.

After noting the damage and tag numbers of Nesbitt's car, Parsons said he returned to his own machine and departed. It was then, according to testimony, that the chase started.

Nesbitt and his sister, it was related, jumped into their car and started in pursuit, blowing their horn and shouting when they drew abreast of the Representative's car in front of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments.

At this point, Assistant Corporation Counsel Mahorner asked Parsons if he heard Miss Ellis and her brother yelling for him to stop.

"No, I didn't hear what they said," he responded.

"What did you think they wanted?"

Charges "Frame-up."

"They had been hounding me all the way up the street. I assumed they were trying to force me into another accident," said Parsons. "I kept on going because I wasn't going to let anyone engage me in a brawl on the street."

There was a pause in Parsons' testimony and he charged:

"I am convinced the whole proposition is a frame-up."

A few minutes later, it was testified that three women accompanied the Illinois legislator in his machine. There were two witnesses present who said they were with him—Mrs. Caroline Hinkley, of the Valley Vista Apartments, and Miss Beulah Hess, secretary to Representative Farley.

When Mahorner asked for the name of the third woman, Parsons instructed his attorney not to give it. He said she could not be present and her name was unimportant.

Denying he led the Rock Creek Park chase at 40 to 60 miles an hour, Parsons said his speedometer never registered over 40—"and usually slower than that."

"I didn't know whether they were going to shoot or what," he explained. "I am ordinarily a careful driver and don't break laws. The only speeding and reckless driving which was done was on the part of Nesbitt."

Interjected Mahorner:

"But Nesbitt was behind you most of the time."

Claude Austell, a cab driver who was hailed by Miss Ellis in the chase, testified he was "going as fast as my cab would go and at times traveling 60 miles an hour."

Miss Ellis Injured.

From the scene of the accident Nesbitt said he trailed the Parsons' car to a gas station at Connecticut avenue and Porter street. There the Representative stopped after cutting through the station and onto Porter street from the avenue.

Miss Ellis, it was testified, tried to open a front door of the Congressional car "to get the driver's name." She claimed she was shoved from the running board and injured her leg.

This incident was denied by Parsons. He said the woman "might have fallen," but she was not pushed by him. Olan Hill, attendant at the filling station, said he saw Miss Ellis fall from the machine and, at the same time, saw the front door open and close.

Chased Into the Apartment.

From the gas station, it was reported, the chase led into Rock Creek Park by Tilden street, through Mount Pleasant, back into the park and finally to the garage of the Broadmoor Apartments, where Parsons lives.

Parsons, said Miss Ellis, left his car and "ran into the building" from a garage entrance. She then summoned police. Policeman Roland Kirby, of the Eighth Precinct, said he found the Congressional car damaged on one side.

Later, Kirby said, he located Parsons in his apartment and suggested he go to the police station. Parsons appeared at the Eight Precinct about 8 p. m., the policeman said.

Attorney Cites "Privileges."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Neilson rendered the decision charging Parsons and Nesbitt with the traffic infractions.

Shipe, Parsons' attorney, assailed the decision, pointing out his client was a "member of the United States Congress."

"I claim this is a pure frame-up," said Shipe. "There is a campaign in the District of Columbia against members of Congress who have special privileges and hold Congressional tags. It is outrageous to charge this man and have it blasted in headlines."

Said Parsons:

"I have never asked for any immunities nor special privileges. I am just providing publicity for parties who are trying to frame me."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. AGV

Senators Vote $9,000,000 for Venereal Drive

accompanying the measure and adopted by the full committee, Senator Copeland, a former health commissioner of New York City, and Senator Nye pointed out that 1,116,000 new cases of syphilis alone are treated by physicians annually. More than half are in advanced stages.

Physicians treat 1,037,000 cases of gonorrhea each year, the report said, and hundreds of thousands of other venereal disease sufferers attempt self-medication or rely on "quacks."

State Funds Inadequate.

Existing facilities in the States are adequate to care for less than one-fourth of all cases properly, the committee asserted, emphasizing that 40 to 70 weeks of treatment are required in syphilis control. Stress also was laid on the point that one-fifth of all venereal disease victims are under the age of 20; also that nearly one-half of all syphilis is acquired innocently.

The report cited figures showing that 60,000 children are born annually with congenital syphilis and 25,000 stillbirths are attributable to the guilty spirochete. Gonorrhea, it was pointed out, is responsible for 50 per cent of sterility among men and women.

An estimated $10,000,000 is spent annually on blind persons who owe their affliction to syphilis and the cost of keeping the syphilitic insane in institutions is more than $31,000,000, the report continued.

"Only through Federal aid and a national program can there be sufficient hope of successful attack to justify broad State and local expenditures for this purpose," the report stated. "Sporadic, unconcerted, local action is a waste of funds.

"It cannot defeat syphilis in a mobile population such as ours. Such action could never keep it defeated. This war must be fought on 48 fronts.

"With adequate expenditures over the next decade and a half syphilis, in particular, and gonorrhea, in all probability, can be reduced to negligible proportions."

D. C. to Participate.

It concluded: "The sub-committee concludes that this problem must be attacked, that the weapons of medicine and public health are adapted to make the attack, that the methods proposed in this bill are suitable to the need and that there is a public readiness for the undertaking.

"Only a sufficient armament is lacking and this bill will supply that armament."

Indorsed by the American Public Health Association, the conference of State and Territorial health officers and numerous other private agencies and individuals, the bill authorizes the Surgeon General to determine the needs in the States and make allotments.

The District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii would benefit under the program, as well as the States, counties, cities and towns.

annually by a local beer tax.

Subsequently Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, of the subcommittee, instructed Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to draft two new provisions for the District tax bill, one setting up a beer levy and the other repealing the inoperative 60-40 law.

The latter proposal is obviously a rebuke to the trade and civic organizations which have appeared before the subcommittee and complained that the Federal Government is not obeying the statute which says that it shall bear 40 per cent of the cost of operating the District government.

Hearings End Today.

The subcommittee will conclude hearings today and proceed to prepare the bill for submission to the full committee.

Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, while assailing the business privilege tax and urging sales levy, hazarded the "guess" that if the merchants are compelled to decide between a gross receipts tax and an income levy they would choose the latter.

He further pleased the sub-committee by adding:

"And I doubt the wisdom of imposing the tax on the salary of Congressmen at all."

Representative Cole (Republican), of New York, one of the champions of the income levy, said:

"Don't you think all this talk about Congressmen escaping the income tax is silly?"

J. Nelson Anderson, counsel for the Federation of Business Mens' Association, likewise questioned, expressed the belief that the members he represented would prefer an income tax to continuation of the business privilege levy.

Earlier Colladay was charged with assuming "a defensive attitude" when he gave his personal opinion that the income tax would be preferable but added that it should be applied to all persons earning income in Washington and to the full $10,000 salaries of members of Congress.

Dirksen Opposes Idea.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the newest District income tax, challenged this opinion and asserted it is "indefensible and not founded in logic."

Dirksen declared that he had "stuck out my neck" last year by championing the income tax in the House and that now he wouldn't go so far as to maintain that the levy should apply to a member's full salary when he spends only a part of the year in the Capital. His idea, he explained, is to make the member pay for municipal services received while a resident of Washington.

Colladay also was rebuked by the subcommittee for stating that 10 per cent of the residents of Washington account for half of the District's expenditures.

Chairman Nichols and Dirksen figured out that this meant that $22,000,000 was spent for the benefit of 60,000 persons.

Criminals Don't Pay.

Colladay, after first attempting to defend the statement by citing the criminal element that pays no taxes, finally asked leave to withdraw the remark.

Wood objected, however, on the ground that it still constituted the opinion of the Board of Trade.

Corporation Counsel Seal explained that his office had been forced to fix a limit on the definition of business under the act and had decided that the levy applies where services are performed, but does not apply where they are not.

Whiteford suggested that the income tax, if adopted, should be based on a percentage of the Federal income tax payments in order to simplify accounts and collections, but at the same time he asserted that the exemptions should be lower than in the United States act.

Anderson, of the Federation of Business Men's Association, asked for restoration of the $1.50 realty tax, discontinuance of the business privilege tax, and enactment of a sales tax.

Paul Kerman, of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., complained that the stores which he represented pay the gross receipts tax twice in that the corporation's sales are taxed as well as the sales of the merchants.

Jo V. Morgan, special tax counsel in the corporation counsel's office, brought out, however, that independent grocers pay the tax three times through manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, while the chain stores pay it only once.

The District Grocery Stores, Inc., have an advantage, he added, in that they are allowed $2,000 exemptions for each of their 270 stores, whereas chain stores are given only one exemption for the entire chain.

British Draft Terms of Pact With Mussolini

London

Spain, the United Press reported. Italy has agreed previously.—Editor's note.]

Diplomatic quarters restrained optimism over the possible success of Britain's new departure with Mussolini as they pointed out each side has a long list of objectives which, in themselves and in the order in which they were placed, offered obstacles.

Britain's main conditions as listed by competent quarters are:

Reduction of Italy's forces in Libya, North Africa.

Cessation of Italy's anti-British propaganda in the Near East.

Italian recognition of British commercial interests in Spain.

Possibly an Italian undertaking to establish Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who fled his country when the Italians conquered it in 1935-36, as a puppet emperor over at least a part of his former domain.

Italian support for a four-power pact among Britain, Italy France and Germany, thereby imposing restrictions on Nazi expansionist aims.

Italy was expected to raise difficulties over at least two points, reduction of the Libyan forces and the project of doing something for Haile Selassie.

She already has accepted the proposal to withdraw her forces from Spain.

The following were understood to be Italy's chief objectives:

Recognition of the conquest of Ethiopia, which Italy annexed on May 9, 1936.

Some form of neutralization of both the Suez Canal and the Strait of Gibraltar to give Mussolini a guarantee his fleet never would be bottled up in the Mediterranean.

Possible transfer to Italy of some of Britain's shares in the Suez Canal and abolition of Canal dues for Italian vessels.

Financial help, either through a loan or through credits, as outlined in the international economic plan drafted by former Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium.

The stopping of the supply of arms to unruly natives in Ethiopia suspected of being sent from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Kenya Colony—one object Italy hoped to achieve through gaining recognition of her Ethiopian conquest.

Britain May Oppose.

There were indications Britain may oppose any large concessions on the second, third and fourth points and also may demand stringent guarantees any financial help would not be used to divert Italian money to rearmament.

There was no certainty the talks would surmount the snag in past discussions over the moment when Britain should recognize Ethiopia, which has almost three times the area of the kingdom of Italy, as Italian.

Italy previously had demanded recognition as the first concession while the British government wanted to wait until its demands were satisfied.

Charged with the sole responsibility for a new era in Britain's foreign relations, Chamberlain, however, gambled on success in drawing Italy into a far-reaching plan possibly aimed at curbing Nazi expansion in Central Europe through the binding restrictions of the long-dormant four-power pact.

(Mussolini sponsored the four-power pact in 1933, but it has been almost a dead letter from the beginning. Its purpose was to associate Britain, France, Germany and Italy in common policies to protect European peace.)

It was considered in some quarters here that that would be tantamount to smashing the Rome-Berlin axis, long a secret objective of British foreign policy, even under Eden.

Diplomatic reports from Central Europe that with Italy's aid there was "still time" to prevent entire destruction of Austrian independence were understood to have reached Chamberlain.

At the same time there were advices that an Anglo-Italian settlement indorsed by France would go far toward restoring Anglo-French influence throughout Middle Europe.

Mussolini, who originally conceived the four-power pact, also was known now to be anxious to include Poland. Thus he could keep that country as Italy's ally and bind Hitler not to turn Poland into another Austria.

The British Labor Party and Trades Union Council demand for a general election was contained in a manifesto which declared "the government holds no mandate for the vital change it has made in foreign policy."

(The government's election manifesto in 1935, when the last general election was held, upheld the League of Nations.)

Chamberlain told Commons he would not "pledge myself in advance" on the question of Ethiopian recognition in the negotiations with Italy.

He refused to publish recent Anglo-Italian communications over the forthcoming negotiations, insisting this would "serve no useful purpose."

Spaak Assails Front Against Fascist Nations

Belgian Foreign Minister Threatens to Quit if Support Fails.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Feb. 23.—Foreign Minister Paul H. Spaak threatened today to resign unless his Socialist colleagues approve his policy of discouraging the alignment against the Fascist nations.

He declared democratic nations attached to the League of Nations did not respond to the necessities of the present situation in reaching a general appeasement.

He went on to condemn the policy of those who would "slip from collective security into military alliances."

The foreign minister expressed opposition to sending representatives to Gen. Franco in insurgent Spain but said recognition of the Italian Ethopian empire became a fact on the occasion of the Montreaux conference.

Italian delegates to the Montereaux (Switzerland) meeting in June, 1936, came with credentials as representatives of the King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia. Spaak said acceptance of those credentials was in effect recognition of Italy's claim to the East African empire.

Six Socialists belong to Belgium's coalition cabinet.

Paris War Unit Holds Its First ParleySince '18

Secret Defense Body Maps Tactics if Nazis Attack Czechoslovakia.

By the United Press.

Paris, Feb. 23.—France's secret defense committee met today for the first time since the World War, to organize an $855,400,000 arms expansion program and plan strategy for the defense of Czechoslovakia against any German invasion.

The secret committee, under former Premier Joseph Caillaux, began its work as the cabinet sought to extract from Great Britain a pledge that, regardless of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's new deals with the German and Italian dictators, Czech sovereignty will be defended.

Rigid Assurance Asked.

Premier Camille Chautemps, it was revealed, has served notice on Britain that she can expect France's support for a new western Locarno pact, to include Britain, Germany, Italy and France, only in exchange for rigid assurances of Czech and Austrian protection.

France, the cabinet decided, does not intend to sacrifice her military allies on Germany's eastern border for the promise of a four-power appeasement and has no intention of giving Fuehrer Adolf Hitler a free Nazi hand in Central Europe for a questionable promise of 10 or 20 years of peace in the west.

Willing to Consult.

France's revamped policy, in the light of events in Berlin, Vienna and London in the last ten days, appeared tonight to contain a willingness to consult with Britain, Germany and Italy on political, colonial, economic and territorial issues and a general settlement provided:

1. The agreement is open to all interested continental powers, big and small—meaning all of France's allies and particularly Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Little Entente as well as Soviet Russia.

2. A thorough understanding that France will remain firm in her military alliances with Czechoslovakia and Russia.

This is the program which Premier Camille Chautemps and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos will put up to Parliament, risking the government's life on a vote of confidence, in a foreign affairs debate starting Friday and extending through Saturday.

Victim Ailing, Start Of Laing Shooting Trial Is Delayed

Allegedly because its principal witness still is incapacitated, the Government yesterday asked a continuance in the case of Mrs. Annie V. Lang, roominghouse proprietress, who is charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. It was explained in Police Court that James A. McNamara, athletic director of the Jewish Community Center, whom Mrs. Laing is charged with shooting February 5, has not yet left Emergency Hospital.

Hospital authorities, however, said last night that McNamara was discharged February 8. He was shot in the leg.

McNamara went to Mrs. Laing's roominghouse, 2417 Eighteenth street northwest, with Miss Catherine Scanlon, a waitress in the restaurant he operates. An altercation developed, during which Mrs. Laing shot McNamara, police say.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Recognition.

Anyone who has seen the product—the work achieved with such fine inspiration—of the men and women on the Federal writers projects will hear now with little surprise the announcement of prizes they have won in high places.

The editors of Story Magazine have awarded a $500 prize for creative talent to Richard Wright of the project in New York City for his group of novellas, "Uncle Tom's Children." Seven writers, now or formerly employed on the writers' project, were given prizes or special mention in this nation-wide contest open to employes of the WPA.

Wright, winner of the prize in a field of 600, was born in Mississippi, and held jobs from dishwashing to secretarial work; has published in "Anvil," "Midland," and many other magazines, and received praise for the story he contributed to "American Stuff," the Federal Writers Project Anthology of off-time work brought out by Viking Press.

Second prize was given Meridel LeSueur, a well-known mid-western writer, for her short novel, "The Horse." She was formerly on the Federal writers' project in Minnesota and now is employed by another branch of the Administration. Honorable mention went to:

"American Primitive," by Fred Rothermell, of the Project in New York; "Star Ploughed Under," by Stephen Tolland Griggs, of the New York project; "Winter Came Early," by Roaldus Richmond, of the project in Vermont; "The House on Buttonwood Street," by Miriam Allen de Ford, of the project in California, and "The Guilty," by Richard Greenleaf, formerly on the Florida project.

Who's popular: With leading entrants running neck and neck in the last week of the popularity contest sponsored by N. F. F. E. Local 262 (Treasury), which ends March 1, a hot finish is in prospect. Now in first place is Mattie E. Clements (Register's Office), closely pressed by Fred J. Rehm (Coast Guard), Beatrice E. Catron (Disbursement), and Victor Garland (Internal Revenue), in order as stated. Two free trips to New York are the prizes.

In Off-Hours.

Childress Widow May Testify Today At Landlord Trial

The widowed mother of five small children—and some of them—may be called as witnesses in District Court today to testify how their father, jovial Ray E. Childress, 35-year-old cab driver, was shot to death in his basement apartment at 69 New York avenue northeast last October.

Trial of Donald K. Stanton, jr., landlord for the Childress family, was started yesterday before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, with a dispute over the rent due Stanton as one of the main items of controversy.

Stanton was indcted for murder after he allegedly had shot and killed Childress when the latter, according to police, went after him with a piece of wood.

According to Government witnesses, the altercation between Childress and Stanton began when the latter boarded up the Childress apartment because of non payment of rent. Childress returned to the apartment at 7:30 at night October 2, 1936, and battered down the door so his family could re-enter. In the melee that ensued, he was shot and killed.

Green Revokes Pennsylvania A. F. L. Charter

Describes Action as Move to Halt Some Political Ambitions.

By the Associated Press.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L. last night revoked the charter of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor in an effort to thwart certain labor leaders "ambitious for political power."

Green left no doubt that he considered John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chieftain, to be one of the most "ambitious" leaders. The State federation's charter was taken away because its officers refused to drop C. I. O. unions from its roster.

"This action," said Green, "will serve notice that the policies of the 400,000 loyal members of the American Federation of Labor unions in Pennsylvania cannot be dictated by self-constituted labor leaders not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, nor can their votes be delivered by such leaders, ambitious for political power."

The State Federation of Labor is dominated by C. I. O. unions, including Lewis' United Mine Workers. Last March it indorsed Lewis' right-hand man, Thomas Kennedy, for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Political observers saw in Green's statement a notification, particularly to Democratic Party leaders, that Lewis cannot speak for a united labor movement in the Keystone State.

Lewis has expressed the desire to see Kennedy elected Governor. Both Lewis and Kennedy have been negotiating with the party's high command for a place on the ticket, but no agreement has been reached. Kennedy, the present Lieutenant-Governor and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, said in a recent statement that "labor will not be ignored" in the shifting political scene.

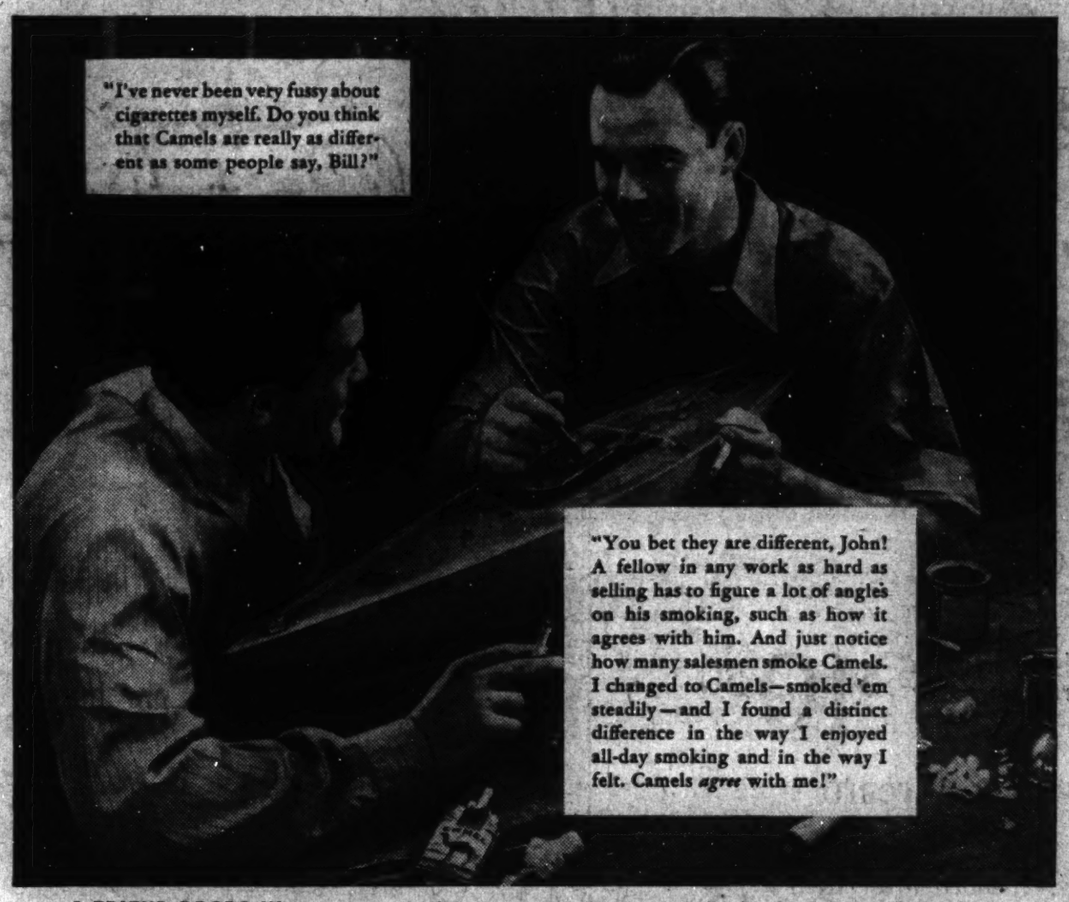
"ARE CAMELS REALLY DIFFERENT FROM OTHER CIGARETTES?"... a question of interest to every smoker



"I've never been very fussy about cigarettes myself. Do you think that Camels are really as different as some people say, Bill?"

"You bet they are different, John! A fellow in any work as hard as selling has to figure a lot of angles on his smoking, such as how it agrees with him. And just notice how many salesmen smoke Camels. I changed to Camels—smoked 'em steadily—and I found a distinct difference in the way I enjoyed all-day smoking and in the way I felt. Camels agree with me!"

A FRIEND DROPS IN to see Bill's model racing sloop. Daly passes the Camels and answers a natural question about smoking. "That all-cigarettes-are-alike talk doesn't square with my experience Believe me, steady smoking is the test that shows Camels in a class by themselves. They don't make my nerves 'edgy.'"

...When H. W. DALY, rayon salesman, says "Yes, Camels are really different," millions of other steady smokers back him up. And that explains why Camels are preferred by the largest body of smokers ever known.

A QUICK KISS FROM MARITA (Mrs. Daly) and Bill is off to catch the 7:55. Soon he'll be under the nervous pressure of a long day—tackling customers and prospects. The Dalys agree about most things. Among them, Camels. Mrs. Daly smoked them first, soon noticed a difference. "Now we find that Camels agree better with both of us," she says.

MARITA'S PLANNING a grand feed. "We enjoy entertaining," Marita says. "I like to have plenty of Camels at the table. Camels cheer up one's digestion. They even cheered up Bill's disposition. Maybe I shouldn't tell that, but it shows that Camels are different!"

ON WEEK-ENDS, Bill goes in for candid camera photography. But on week days he "pounds the streets." "You've got to keep the pressure on to get along selling in my line," he says. "I get plenty tired, but when my energy fails I get a quick 'lift' with a Camel."

Czechs Warn World They'll Defend Selves

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Feb. 23.—Czechoslovakia is ready to defend herself against sudden attack without waiting for outside help, the general staff chief said today.

The republic's whole defense plan, Gen. Ludwig Jan Krejci explained, is based on realizations that wars now begin without declarations and move with swiftness because of airplanes and motorized troops.

He did not mention Germany, but there has been uneasiness here since Chancellor Hitler Sunday proclaimed protection of German minorities in Central Europe.

Czechoslovakia lies next to Germany and has almost 3,500,000 Germans in her population. Nearly two-thirds of the Germans are concentrated in Bohemia, the northwestern part of the country which is bounded on three sides by Germany.

Must Hold Enemy.

It would be a long time before effective help could be expected from allies, the general said, adding that "our task is to hold off the enemy without outside help during the first phase of the fighting."

"For this purpose," he stated, "a far-flung system of fortifications is being erected along our borders. These should give our possible enemies reason to ponder whether plans of brutal aggression would have any chance of success."

He said industry already was in shape to be put on a war basis on short notice and plans for wartime feeding of the population have been worked out.

The leaders steering Czechoslovakia through the present critical period are ready to give Germans, Hungarians, Poles and other minorities every share in public and economic life short of autonomy.

Wait Schuschnigg.

The political leaders of Czechoslovakia are unwilling at this juncture to rush into print. They want first to hear what Kurt Schuschnigg, the Austrian chancellor, says tomorrow night and they want a clearer indication of Great Britain's future foreign policy.

Regarding Britain, Czechoslovak statesmen want to see in what direction the Italo-British discussions tend and whether there is a possibility that a Four-Power Pact among Britain, France, Germany and Italy further will diminish the prestige of the League of Nations.

They refuse to believe that Britain as a whole shares Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's lack of faith in the league and are confident that public opinion will compel Chamberlain to stick to the league and collective security.

They also are firmly convinced that France can be relied upon 100 per cent to come to the aid of Czechoslovakia in case an attempt is made to overrun the little state.

Japan Concession Denied by Mexico

The Mexican Ambassador, Francisco Castillo Najera, denied in a formal statement yesterday that his government had granted commercial concessions in Mexico to Japanese. The statement follows:

"A few days ago several newspapers published the news that the Mexican Government had granted certain concessions to Japanese subjects for the development of commercial activities in Mexican territory or in Mexican ports on the Pacific.

"The Mexican Ambassador in Washington wishes to emphatically deny such versions, which are entirely without foundation."

Tokyo Joins Denial.

Tokyo, Feb. 23 (AP).—The foreign office spokesman today denied reports Japan and Mexico were contracting for Japanese engineers to do construction work at Mazatlan harbor.

'Flying Fortresses' Return to Lima

Lima, Peru, Feb. 23 (AP).—Six United States "flying fortresses," returning from a good will tour of South America landed at 5:24 p. m. (4:24 E. S. T.) today completing a hop from Santiago, Chile.

The planes, under command of Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, took part in the inauguration of Argentina's new President, Roberto Ortiz, and are on their way to Panama.

State Dental Examiner Badly Injured in Fall

Marion, Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—Dr. R. H. Phipps, of Marion, was in an Abingdon hospital in a critical condition today as the result of a fall at his home last night. He stepped backward from an unfinished foundation, striking his head on a concrete wall. His skull was fractured.

Dr. Phipps is a member of the State Board of Dental Examiners and is prominent in civic affairs.

Where Chinese Bombs Struck

Japanese territory was bombarded yesterday for the first time since 1864 when seven Chinese war planes bombed Taihoku and Shinchiku (arrows on inset map) on the island of Formosa. Formosa was ceded to Japan by China in 1895. Japan proper lies far to the north.

Franco Troops Take Positions For Drive to Sea

Picked Divisions Move Into Place for Invasion Below Teruel.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish frontier), Feb. 23.—Picked Spanish rebels moved into positions on the Teruel-Valencia highway tonight to await a signal from Gen. Francisco Franco for a drive through government territory toward the Mediterranean Sea.

Although strongly entrenched government forces stood between them and the coast, Franco's troops were said by military observers to be in a far better position to strike than before the government fighters took Teruel in December, only to lose the city again yesterday.

The new rebel strength lay in the conquest of the Alfambra River Valley, north of Teruel, where government mountain positions previously constituted a threat to left wing insurgent operations.

Government leaders declared on the other hand their forces' positions, overlooking mountain passes 9 miles southeast of Teruel, were "ideal" for defensive purposes and virtually invincible. They took up the positions yesterday after evacuating the provincial capital, 160 miles east of Madrid.

Within the war-scarred city mopping-up operations proceeded while sappers continued to explore a labrynth of underground passages in search of mines believed planted before the government troops withdrew.

Thousands of prisoners who had been held temporarily in the city prison, bank and other buildings were sent back to a camp under heavy guard.

Freighter Shelled.

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—The British freighter Shetland was reported shelled in Valencia Roads this afternoon. The report to Lloyds' here said there were no casualties. The captain informed the owners there was a direct hit in the forecastle. He was proceeding down the Spanish coast to Gibraltar.

Maybe This Is Why You're Constipated

Perhaps the kind of food you eat doesn't give your bowels anything to work on. Meat, potatoes and bread don't form the kind of soft, bulky mass that will help move your bowels.

If so, a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the kind of "bulk" your intestines may need to work properly. And in addition, it contains the intestinal tonic, vitamin B1, which helps to tone them. If you want to get at the cause of your trouble, eat some Kellogg's All-Bran every day—as a cereal or baked in muffins. And drink plenty of water. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Japan Stalled, HighCommand Is Reorganized

Invaders Admit War Will Have to Be Prolonged Indefinitely.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 23.—Stalled on nearly all fronts by the hard-fighting Chinese, the costly Japanese invasion of China today seemed to face indefinite prolongation.

Gen. Shunroku Hata took command of forces in the Shanghai-Nanking area, replacing Gen. Iwane Matsui.

Lieut. Gen. Prince Yashuhiko Asaka, commander of the Japanese force that captured Nanking, and Lieut. Gen. Heisuke Yamagawa, commander of the Hangchow Bay landing force operating south of Shanghai, also relinquished command.

Army Reorganized.

The Japanese described the changes as a "revised organization" of the army, designed to meet the new situation. It was admitted by an army spokesman here that the "new situation" referred to an expected prolongation of the war.

Japanese reported their forces had forced the Chinese to withdraw from northern Honan Province and had advanced to the north bank of the Yellow River in that sector, but, so far, they were unable to cross the wide stream.

Chinese troops defending the south bank of this barrier river have repulsed Japanese efforts to cross east or west of the Peiping-Hankow railway line. The Japanese reported occupying Henghsien, on the north bnak, and "opening the way" for a crossing, but they still have to accomplish it.

Japanese Driven Back.

On the southern front of the Lunghai "corridor" war zone the Chinese reported driving the Japanese back south of the Hwai River. Chinese troops advancing from the west were reported to have pushed within 8 miles of Pengpu, important city of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway near the Hwai River.

The Japanese apparently have lost practically all the ground they gained several weeks ago when they advanced along the railway a considerable distance north of Pengpu.

Japanese forces captured Wuhu, up in the Yangtze from Nanking, and Hangchow, capital of Chekiang Province, two months ago, but have been unable to advance farther inland because strong Chinese guerrilla troops have attacked them repeatedly and raided communication lines.

In Shansi Province Japanese troops advancing into the southern mountain country have had better success. Latest reports said the Japanese in this area advanced 20 miles from Luanfu to capture Tunliu.

Schuschnigg's Talk To Be Heard in U. S.

Vienna, Feb. 23 (AP).—Americans may hear Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg address the Austrian Diet at 7 p. m. tomorrow (1 p. m. E. S. T.). The speech will be broadcast in the United States and six other foreign countries. The chancellor, dictator of Austria since Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated in July, 1934, is expected to explain his side of the current crisis.

Hoover Given Medal Only Leopold Holds

Brussels, Feb. 23 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover today received the Vermeil Medal of Honor which only one other living person—Belgium's King Leopold—possesses.

Paul Hymans, former Belgian foreign minister, paid tribute to Hoover as "the illustrious representative of that liberal democracy which is the hope of all those in the old world who defend liberty and the rights of individuals."

Nazis Absolve Niemoeller of TreasonCharge

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 23.—All charges of treason and political plotting against the fiery Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the Protestant opposition to the Nazi church program have been dropped, it was declared today. A verdict is expected February 28 on the remaining accusations.

These include "speaking disparagingly of leading personages" and "positive resistance against orders not to read from the pulpit names of persons cancelling their church membership."

Evidence was completed today. Testifying in the pastor's defense today were Dr. Ferdinand Sauerbuch, eminent surgeon, and Ernest Bradenburg, chief of a department in the ministry of transportation, whose legs were amputated in the World War.

Both said the patriotism of Niemoeller, wartime submarine commander, was beyond question. They paid tributes to his integrity and honesty of purpose, saying it was inconceivable he could have committed any dishonorable act.

Second Autopsy On His Son's Body Asked by Trotzky

Paris, Feb. 23 (AP).—Leon Trotzky asked through his Paris attorney today for a second autopsy on the body of his son, Leon Sedoff, who died here February 16 after a week's illness. A previous examination indicated Sedoff died of intestinal perforations leading to peritonitis.

Still Uncooperative.

It is now nearly eight months since the Japanese military machine was set in motion to destroy the nationalist government of China. There are many indications that this objective is still far from being attained.

One of them is found in the difficulties the Japanese are having in their effort to capture Hsuchow, important railway junction in Central China or, alternatively, in cutting the Lunghai railway, the principal east-west line in the republic.

The second is the recall of Gen. Matsui and other high Japanese officers hitherto in charge of operations in China. This is strong indication that the powers-that-be in Tokyo are far from satisfied with the way the war has been going. It is not customary to recall victorious generals, or those on whose banners victory is expected soon to rest.

And now, literally out of the blue, the Chinese have carried out a carefully-planned and well-coordinated air raid over Formosa. This not only suggests that the Chinese air force has been rehabilitated but implies that the war may soon be carried to Japanese territory, with Tokyo and Osaka treated to the medicine the Japanese have prescribed so lavishly for Shanghai and Nanking. This is a possibility which the Japanese, conscious of the tinder box aspects of their cities, have good reason to view with dread.

It would not be surprising if discontent were growing in Japan, as the recent Diet flare-up against the Koncye government suggests. When Hitler, in his speech last Sunday, envisaged Japan's eventual defeat by China as a possibility he doubtless spoke from inside information. Certainly there is small evidence that the curious Japanese technique for encouraging Chinese "co-operation" is meeting with any notable success.

S. Parker Gilbert.

In his comparatively brief span of life S. Parker Gilbert had a notable and varied career, both in public and private service. At an age when most men are serving their apprenticeship in minor positions he had already been installed in posts of responsibility, becoming Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and later Undersecretary of the Treasury in charge of fiscal affairs before his thirtieth birthday.

Shortly after resignation from the latter position he was selected to serve as Agent General for Reparations under the Dawes Plan. For more than five years, until the spring of 1930, he discharged the exacting duties of that office, becoming by virtue of the importance of his work one of the world figures of the day. During most of that time controversy raged about the question of Germany's ability to meet reparations payments and the difficulties of transferring those payments. And Mr. Gilbert, as executive head of the Transfer Committee, was in the center of the turmoil.

In this difficult position, as in all his other posts, Mr. Gilbert showed himself an able and industrious administrator with a knowledge of financial problems acquired in the hard school of experience. No man, however able, could have saved the reparations system from ultimate collapse. It survived as long as it did only because Germany was able to obtain huge foreign loans which indirectly supplied the resources for temporary payment of reparations. Because of subsequent events, however, Mr. Gilbert's services during a critical period should not be underrated.

It is true that far-seeing economic analysts were convinced from the beginning that the system of reparations would break down. But in the years immediately following the war, political obstacles to a rational handling of compensation claims were insuperable. The best that could be hoped for was a necessarily unstable compromise. It was for that reason important to have someone of ability and intelligence occupying the position of impartial intermediary between the allied creditors and Germany. It is much to Mr. Gilbert's credit that he emerged without having acquired a reputation for either excessive leniency or undue harshness in carrying out the duties of his office.

On his return from Germany Mr. Gilbert entered the field of investment banking with a background of knowledge and experience that admirably equipped him for a brilliant career in this chosen line of work. The subsequent years of depression afforded him little opportunity to demonstrate his great ability but in the ordinary course of events he would have had many years of useful service ahead of him. The country has need of highly-trained, conscientious and industrious men of his type, and his untimely death will be deeply regretted by all who are acquainted with his career.

Up To The States.

The National Highway Users Conference has just published some interesting data showing the amazing diversity of the standards established under State laws with respect to the size and weight of motor vehicles. The District of Columbia, for example, permits gross axle loads of 24,640 pounds, while the adjacent States of Virginia and Maryland impose maximum limits of 16,000 and 18,000 pounds, respectively. Trucks using South Carolina's highways are limited to a gross weight of 20,000 pounds, whereas North Carolina has a 40,000-pound maximum. In Arizona trucks may not exceed 33 feet in length while Nevada permits a length of 60 feet.

These typical instances of conflicting weight and size regulations emphasize the need for new standards that would introduce order into the existing chaos and make it possible for trucks to move freely in interstate commerce. The seriousness of the problem was brought prominently to public attention last week by a Supreme Court decision upholding South Carolina's severely restrictive law limiting the width and weight of trucks.

While this decision affirms the right of the States to set their weight and size standards independently and to make them applicable to vehicles moving in interstate commerce over highways subsidized by the Federal Government, it is made plain that these powers are subject to restriction if Congress should choose to act. And unless the States show a readiness to co-operate in the establishment of more uniform standards, the case for an extension of Federal control will be unassailable.

Interstate pacts would provide a partial solution of present difficulties. But Nation-wide uniformity of standards is really needed to clear the way for unimpeded truck transportation in all parts of the country. That is the logical and only satisfactory alternative to Federal intervention. The I. C. C. already has its hands more than full trying to administer the provisions of the motor carriers act, without having to take on additional regulatory duties. The first responsibility for action in fixing standards of weight and size for trucks clearly lies within the States.

The increasing centralization of some powers in the Federal Government is an inevitable trend—due to changing economic conditions which make the States inadequate and ineffective units for regulatory purposes. For that reason, as James Truslow Adams points out in an article appearing in the official organ of the Council of State Governments, it becomes all the more important to retain or extend State powers as counterbalances wherever possible.

There is no reason why it should not be done in the present case. Indeed, the States could in co-operation develop a system of uniform standards for trucks that would probably be better suited to their needs and easier to enforce than a system of Federal regulation. And in so doing they would not only be removing annoying obstacles to interstate commerce, but also helping to protect State governments against steady Federal encroachment.

Agency Of Agreement.

In several instances during the last two years major contracts between employers and union representatives seem to have been negotiated with remarkable ease. That was true in the case of the United States Steel Co. Again it has been demonstrated in the agreement between the General Electric Co. and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, an affiliate of the C. I. O.

These agreements may be explained in the same general terms. The companies wisely decided to accept collective bargaining without resistance. And the unions agreed to reasonable terms. On that basis, future conditions of work will be subject to negotiations by the interested parties. If the same willingness to make and accept concessions prevails, contracts of this sort should mark the beginning of a new era in industrial relations in many mass-production industries.

Wage and hour policies are not changed by the G. E.-C. I. O. agreement, except that they become subject to future negotiations. The company has pledged itself to recognize the union as the sole bargaining agent in plants where it has been so designated or can hereafter prove that it represents a majority of the employes. Intimidation and unfair practices with regard to union membership are ruled out on both sides. Strikes and lockouts will not be resorted to until all means of reaching a peaceful settlement of disputes have been exhausted. If direct negotiations fail, reference of the dispute to an impartial arbiter will be considered.

An agreement of this scope could not have been reached in two weeks if the management had not previously come to recognize the social value of collective bargaining. That does not necessarily imply a newly-found sympathy for the working man and his problems. Many employers have long since come to look upon collective bargaining as a theoretically desirable means of increasing efficiency, of eliminating unjustified inequalities among employes, of improving morale and of avoiding sporadic labor disturbances.

It does not follow that mere recognition of a union will produce these desirable results. But a co-operative attitude on the part of the employer is likely to encourage the development of responsible unions. Fortunately, there is an increasing number of employers who recognize in orderly collective bargaining a means of diminishing the chances of industrial warfare.

A Local Relief Inquiry.

Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations, makes a very sensible suggestion in urging an immediate and impartial inquiry into the relief needs of this community.

There are great and evidently honest differences of opinion as to the actual extent of the unrelieved distress in the District, and there are also doubts as to the efficiency with which available funds are being employed. Indeed the Public Assistance Division admits that with its limited appropriation and inadequate staff of investigators it cannot keep a close supervision over relief cases. Furthermore, lacking funds to care for any more relief applicants, the District officials have not undertaken to ascertain the extent of unrelieved distress.

Instead of prolonging a fruitless controversy over the extent of current relief needs and the size of the additional appropriations required, the logical procedure would therefore be to authorize an expert examination of the local situation. As Senator Thomas says, Congressional committees are not equipped for this kind of investigation. And local officials, having been put on the defensive by the relief controversy, are not in a position to undertake the completely detached and objective study for which the situation calls.

As in so many cases of conflict between Congress and the local authorities, the origin of the trouble over the relief appropriation traces back to the District's defective budgetary machinery.

The refusal of Congress to vest responsibility for the local budget in the hands of the District Commissioners deprives the latter's expenditure estimates of the validity they would otherwise have. The knowledge that these estimates are subject to revision—which usually means pruning by the Federal Budget Bureau and later by Congress, constitutes a temptation to systematic overestimate and gives rise to public suspicion that they are highly tentative.

So long as the District's fiscal affairs are caught in the tangle of divided authority there will continue to be irreconcilable differences of opinion, such as those that have arisen over relief appropriations. A factual inquiry appears to be the proper solution of the present impasse but it provides no guarantee against a recurrence of the same trouble next year. That can only come from basic reforms calculated to provide a more responsible system of municipal government for Washington.

Unhappy Handling.

There was much that was appealing and timely in the Washington's Birthday broadcast which Secretary Ickes addressed to the British people. But certain passages of the address must have been rather confusing to our transatlantic cousins. It will be excusable if they received the curious impression that only the Democrats in America believe in democracy. For several times the Secretary of the Interior labored pretty heavily to put that impression across.

The Secretary was careful to emphasize that he spoke as a private citizen. So it was appropriate for him to say nothing about the wire-tapping and espionage methods employed in his department. To untutored British ears this might have seemed to smack more of fascism than the fact that everyone in this country does not even yet regard every aspect of the New Deal as the demonstrated epitome of political and economic wisdom.

The British are firm believers in the virtues of opposition as a balance wheel of politics. To them, therefore, there may have been a strange sound in Mr. Ickes' intimation that only economic royalists, reactionary publishers, political die-hards and congenital exploiters are critical of Mr. Roosevelt, collectively forming "a heavy drag to the wheels of our progress." They will be pardoned if they conclude that among the threats to American democracy is numbered a splenetic and vituperative attitude on the part of those in power. For our English cousins are wise in the ways of politics—quite wise enough to know that the man who is righteous is not always right.

As Mr. Ickes said, a series of transatlantic broadcasts on the issues confronting democracy is a "happy thought." It continues to be a happy thought in spite of some unhappy handling of the opening number. It will demonstrably prove to be a happy thought if future speakers, in or out of government office, concern themselves less with acclaiming the nobility of their personal viewpoint and more with examining fundamental matters of Anglo-American interest.

With these matters, one may reasonably assume, those unfortunately unable to cast a vote for the New Deal are likely to be more concerned.

An anti-suicide club has been formed in New York. It is understood that any member who takes his life will be immediately expelled from this organization.

Time works a few changes for the better as it marches on. It has been about 25 years since we've seen a young man in ice cream breeches playing a mandolin.

Another great trouble with the years is that each one has one February too many and one June too few.

Rome-Berlin-Tokyo-Washington Axis?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Otto Strecker, who is obviously a patriotic Nazi rather than a patriotic American, has drawn from my letter of February 12 some implications which cannot by any stretch of the imagination be found there. The point I would make and emphasize here is this:

Many people in this country would like to protest against a prevalent sentiment that the foreign policy pursued by Great Britain is necessarily the right policy and the one which the United States should follow. (Are we a sovereign state or are we a British dominion?) This is strongly reminiscent of the World War. Surely we have learned something from that painful experience. The policy of the United States before and during that war was obviously influenced by Great Britain, and the result of that policy was that we emerged with the thought that the world had been "made safe for democracy" and with an apalling load of foreign debts to this country. Today we are again being persuaded to "save democracy." Quo usque tandem Britannia democratian servabimus?

Our Nazi friend seems to think that if the United States does not side with Britain in her European and Asiatic quarrels, it must take the opposite side. The majority of people in this country say we shall not join either the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo faction or the London-Paris-Moscow faction. We joined a faction in 1917 and the total result is—nothing. Today we are back where we started in 1914—with communism and its concomitant, totalitarianism, to boot—more painful experiences arising from the World War.

ELEANOR H. FINCH.
Chevy Chase, Md., Feb. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One patriotic American (whose family has been in this country over 200 years), of British, Scotch (and some German) descent, rises to refute most vigorously every statement made by Mr. Otto Strecker. There is not one of his opinions that should be accepted by any thinking American. The English-speaking races are the hope of the world.

He says "except for the unfortunate accident of language we have nothing whatsoever in common with England, Canada, or any part of the British Empire." Anyone who knows anything of the background of the fundamental ideals, laws, customs, traditions, literature, of this country is fully aware of its (in the main) British origin. His statement is no doubt true as regards himself and his allegiance, which is anything but American. And whom does he mean by "we?"

As an American patriot he is unwilling to see "our (whose?) national identity submerged;" and says the "destiny of the world depends upon" the ultimate triumph of Germany, Italy and Japan in the "next war." That is about the best way that could be devised to submerge "our national identity;" and Mr. Strecker's own identity along with it, notwithstanding that he appears to be a good Nazi.

He refers to "those of us who recognize the absolute necessity of a completely controlled agriculture and industry in the modern state." Happily "those" are very much in the minority, even if rather noisy at times; and always will be in the minority in this country, if the right-thinking people do their part.

He remarks that "the outworn ideas of the 'right of the individual' and of so-called 'personal liberty' must be stamped ruthlessly out of our educational system and that system reorientated (a good word) to train the individual and the group for the service of the state." He means—for the service of whichever dictator may be in control of the state. He should know that the very "outworn ideas" at which he sneers are the basis of laws that permit him and his kind to write and have published (without fear of being "liquidated") such a letter as appears over his signature. He might try a similar experiment in one of his favorite "totalitarian states." Assuming the remote possibility that any newspaper in any of those countries would print a letter advocating some other form of government than theirs, he would be plucked from his home so quickly that he would scarcely know what had happened to him—and neither would his family know.

But the crux of Mr. Strecker's letter, the capstone to this monument of totalitarianism which he has tried to erect, comes in the last paragraph, where he says that for the time being "we" must rely upon "the isolationists and the temporarily useful pacifists in Congress and in the country to prevent any undertaking with Britain that might weaken and delay the ultimate triumph and vindication of the German world state and its allies." Here he really comes out into the open! No more talk of being a "patriotic American;" he lets it be understood that what he has been working toward all the time is to establish, sustain and glorify the "German world state and its allies." In the latter category I suppose the United States would be permitted a small voice. And what about Great Britain?

Mr. Strecker's opinions and viewpoint are so un-American, so at variance with the thinking of the great and overwhelming majority of the people of this country, that it would undoubtedly amaze him if he could see the results of a poll upon his chosen thesis.

Out upon such sentiments; they have no place in these United States! M. G. K.
Washington, Feb. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Patriotic American" scarcely deserves the title he assumes when he makes such an obvious and unwarranted attack upon our institutions as Mr. Otto Strecker has just done through the letter columns of The Post.

Neither our own self-interest nor international stability necessitates our inclusion in the present Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. Nor do we, as a nation, desire it. What most observers, both foreign and domestic, do not seem to realize is that totalitarianism is so unsuited to our ideals and well being that its furtherance among us is practically impossible.

As a group we are naive, individualistic, given to insisting upon our rights as individuals, and very jealous of those rights. Yet it is this very individualism that makes the American temperament so incomprehensible. We are insatiable lovers of liberty and democracy. We rant and rave about the difficulties of democratic government, taxation and civic corruption, but let some one attempt to foist another form of government upon us. The resultant explosion would shake even Mr. Strecker.

That our heritage is largely Teutonic-Aryan is not even remotely true. We are a heterogeneous group composed largely of peoples of English, Scotch, Irish descent, and a goodly number of those of German, Italian, French and Scandinavian blood who have been rapidly assimilated. There are also nearly 15,000,000 Americans of African descent who make up one-tenth of our population. This heterogeneous mass has grown in the short space of a century and a half into a homogeneous mixture that understands and appreciates its American heritage.

Many of our forebears left the countries of their origin because of persecutions, desire to worship God in their way, hatred of forced military service and the stern rule of unjust dictators. In this country, for the most part, they found the land of their dreams. It offered opportunity, freedom from religious and military coercion and the satisfaction of security. It was for them an escape into reality.

Now in the midst of great world unrest we are planning a new economy. Any attempt to give this new economy a totalitarian tinge will but result in its failure. We may co-operate for the common good, but a certain narrowing of individual freedom we will never endure.

The German-American Bund is as alien to our American ideals as the Communist movement and concentration camps would be. We Americans have fought three major wars. The first for independence, the second for the abolition of slavery and the third for the perpetuation of democratic institutions and customs. Are we to fight a fourth for political liberty? We are capable of doing so.

I am afraid Mr. Strecker will have to look elsewhere for the allies the dictator ridden countries so obviously need rather than in democratic America.

A certain foreign writer once said, "Democracy is not a perfect thing, but it is better than living under an irresponsible dictatorship ruling by the grace of God." He lived under one, he knew!

ELLIOTT R. SMITH.
Washington, Feb. 20.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: In Otto Strecker's letter, "What Every Patriotic American Hopes," he exercises his freedom of speech under the best Government in the world. Does he realize that if he had published the same article in his beloved Germany, only changing it to "What Every Patriotic German Hopes," and then had proceeded to heap anathema upon the totalitarian state, as he did upon democracy, he would have been promptly incarcerated in a prison or concentration camp?

Foreigners in our midst who are blinded by love for their fatherland are our greatest menace. The fact that they call themselves Americans does not make them loyal American citizens. If they are dedicated to un-American principles and practices, they have no right to enjoy the blessings of American freedom and justice. Why don't they return to their beloved country? We don't want that subtle poison in our national life.

It is unfortunate that we do not have the necessary legislation to deprive foreigners who refuse to become Americanized of their citizenship and deport them.

MRS. L. F. HATCH.
Lorton, Va., Feb. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You certainly do not have to wait until you reach his signature in his letter published in The Post of February 21 to know that Mr. Otto Strecker is almost certainly a patriotic German citizen. He surely cannot be a patriotic American citizen if he advocates our embracing the Kaiser's idea of taking us over and "kulturing" us, even though the word "Nazi" is substituted to indicate the same disease.

Mr. Strecker must know that, even though his Hitler hides himself behind a Charlie Chaplin mustache, we still are able to distinguish the good old Kaiser's waxed points.

Mr. Strecker possibly forgets that, though the ancestors of many of us fought to obtain our freedom from England, starting in 1775, the German princes rented quite a number of Germans, called "Hessians," to a King of England to help frustrate our war for independence.

How very pleased Mr. Borah and Mr. Johnson must feel to have the commendation of Mr. Strecker!

Smelt Run.

I HAD heard strange tales of Beulah, Mich., long before I ever saw the place. In odd bits of conversation I had learned of the smelt run which took place every year up a little stream which ran through the heart of the town, of the mass of fish fighting their way upstream to the spawning grounds. I had been told of the trick man had played on the fish, how he built a cement trough and diverted the stream through it in order that he might scoop the fish up as they went by. Someone had described the setting, told me how his box-like trough had been made 6 feet deep and about 20 yards long and how the fish rushed up through it, repeating the same strange thing which had gone on hundreds of years before in that same stream.

Nature's habits, it seemed, were strange. When Michigan was a wilderness and the Indians its only inhabitants, that stream, of all those emptying into the lake, was chosen as the spawning ground. That strange rush to the headwaters was going on when the trading posts were established, when the lumber was being eaten out of the great forests, on through the days of settlement by the whites; it continued after the forests had been stripped and is still going on, in spite of the treacherous cement trough. All this I heard before I saw Beulah.

* * * *

The homely main street of the town held an air of suspended festivity as we drove in about sundown. Lights were going on in the houses scattered along the side streets and smoke hung low over the roof tops. It was dinner time and homeward bound youngsters scurried in front of us on the bridge. One of them leaned over the railing and stared at the small stream.

"Dad says they'll run at 10," he yelled to his companion.

"Parade at 8," floated back from the other as he disappeared across a vacant lot.

By the time we had found the hotel and parked the car it was quite dark. The lights from the stores threw a pattern of light on the boardwalk running along the street. The windows of stores and hotel were filled with fishing equipment and the restaurant announced its fish dishes in large red type.

Dinner ordered, we came alive to the hum of conversation going on about us. Everyone was talking fish.

This was a different type of fish talk from any other I had ever heart, not the serious debate over the proper tackle or flies, nor yet the bragging anecdotes of big catches. They talked as though fishing were fun. I had always heard it mentioned reverently.

We wandered down to the end of Main street after dinner. There a temporary town had grown. Trailers and wagons, old cars with carts, tents and shacks had been set up as homes. A trailer with red leather seats lining the walls was parked next to one whose top was made of tin cans. Their owners were swapping fish stories.

We turned to go back down the street and saw the band forming for the parade. At its head was a fellow in high rubber boots. A football helmet sat rakishly on his head. The instruments were as oddly assorted as the clothes of the players.

With a blare and much thumping of the drum, the band started off. People fell into line behind it as it passed and by the time the leader had reached the other end of town, the street was filled with a yelling happy crowd. They did a snake dance up and down, back and forth, in the street. It was almost 10 o'clock.

A high voice carried over the music and noise and the entire group broke ranks and ran for the bridge. They were all ages and sizes and were dressed in everything from boots to galoshes, some wearing bathing suits and sweaters, others in raincoats.

We gained the bridge in time to see the little stream below swollen with shining fish. Million of smelt were fighting their way up that narrow passage which man had turned into a concrete basin.

Torches threw a leaping light on the scene. The crowd had jumped down in the cement trough and were catching at the fish. Some had baskets, others seines and a few were getting along well with their bare hands. The water, held back by the human dam, was rising.

A fat woman catching fish in her apron sat down suddenly. Someone hauled her up again and she laughed and went on scooping up fish.

The siren on the firehouse was whining, car horns blowing, a youngster was beating the deserted drum and all the time the crowd howled and screamed over a good catch.

It seemed hours before they quit, before the smelt turned back to wait their chance in the dark waters beyond the mouth of the stream.

They straggled up out of the water, wet and happy. Orange crates and tin buckets were heaped with the fish that didn't get by. The musicians picked up their instruments where they had dropped them and went toward home, their catch under their arms. The noise died down. The last straggler thumped heavily over the board walk. Lights in the stores were turned out one by one and the smelt run was over for the night.

Fair Enough

Appeal To Mr. Gould.

Kansas City.

IN THE COURSE OF this pleasant visit to Kansas City, where the blackjack dealer sits at his kidney-shaped table flipping cards to the clients in plain view of the public and the law, gamblers suffer much from the cynicism of those who like to think the worst.

I gave expression to a little doubt one recent evening while visiting a resort called the State Line Tavern, a dance hall, bar and gambling house down in the cattle and railroad yards which straddles the line between wanton Missouri and bleeding Kansas, with mischief and mirth on the Missouri side and nothing but morality and space in the few square feet where Kansas is.

There is some sort of lawing in process against the management at this writing on the claim of a Kansas authority that some clients of the tavern were crowded over the line one busy night when a goodly throng was there and were caught feloniously casting dice on forbidden ground. A survey is being made and ere the thing is settled Missouri and Kansas may resort to arms again, as of old, to make war over a boundary.

• • • •

THE MANAGER had turned over to an assistant the stick or crook with which the cubes are retrieved from where they fall and was explaining with gracious patience what folly it would be for a casino with a steady, high-class trade like his to permit any tricks of magic with the cubes or cards.

The clientele, incidentally, was composed in the main of men in overalls or other hardy apparel and seemed to be railroad laborers and freighters employed on the interstate truck lines. Some were scuffling around in the stately measures of the squirm with spotty and bedraggled ladies to whom no formal introduction seemed necessary, but most were hanging around the crap-tables, and none, be it said to the credit of their intelligence, were playing the bird cage.

Incidentally, it is very bad form to refer to the stickman's stick as a crook—a word as shocking in the State Line Tavern and similar resorts as the word bloody in an English drawing room.

Loaded dice and don'ts, the manager declared, and all other deceptions are positively forbidden in his pastimes and for proof he proudly displayed a franchise which said that E. A. Gould, the exclusive purveyor of dice to the State Line Tavern, upon thorough investigation of the proprietor's character and the ethical standards of his place, had been pleased to confer this honor.

"This certifies," the document read, "that the State Line Tavern have complied with all the requirements necessary to receive this franchise, which is subject to withdrawal for cause at any time without notice. One thousand dollars will be paid to anyone who can prove that any dice bearing the signature of E. A. Gould are not perfect, trued dice."

It bore a gold seal with two red ribbons and the personal signature of Mr. Gould himself, a leading member of the gambling tool business, who is fighting to command for the game of craps, more truly than baseball, the American national game, the public respect and confidence which have been sacrificed to scurrilous innuendo and hearsay. He has composed a brochure, in which he declares that any club displaying his franchise may be patronized with full confidence that the character and integrity of the men in charge have been investigated and approved by E. A. Gould.

IT WAS a reassuring lesson, but my confidence backslid somewhat next day when I learned that a friend had filched from a blackjack dealer, to whom he lost $20, a deck of cards whose back design contained a subtle but distinct variation to distinguish the cards below No. 8 from those above.

Could this have been a slip of the printing press, do you suppose? Because my friend insists that dealing blackjack with this deck, he has a valuable clew to the size of his opponent's hole-card and a potent advantage in deciding how much he has to beat himself.

Perhaps it was a mechanical error, but if so, how would you account for a curious operation observed at a factory where a young salesman inadvertently led the way into a room marked "Positively Employes Only," where a young woman with deft, sure fingers was busy making certain red ink marks on the back designs of hundreds of new red-back playing cards?

I asked the young woman what these marks were for, but she only giggled and wouldn't say, and the best I can do is hope that she was just touching them up for aesthetic reasons. I appeal to Mr. Gould as defender of a long-suffering trade.

Hungary's Offer

Budapest Government Through Minister Here Suggests Possible Basis of New Debt Arrangement With The United States.

Note: The following aide-memoire on Hungary's relief debt to the United States was issued yesterday by John Pelenyi, Hungarian Minister.

HUNGARY, normally a wheat and flour exporting country, was faced in 1920 with a threatening famine. It became necessary, therefore, to purchase on credit from the United States Grain Corporation 13,890 tons of flour at a price of $121.37 per ton and the Hungarian government became indebted to the American Government for the cost of this purchase in the amount of $1,685,835.

This debt was funded into interest-bearing bonds in 1924. The funded principal amount of these bonds was $1,939,000, since there was included in the total an amount of $253,000 which had accrued as interest between 1920 and 1924.

The Hungarian-American debt settlement was worked out on the same basis as the British-American debt funding settlement, containing none of the concessions which were later granted from those terms to other countries. The total principal to be repaid included, as has already been remarked, a large element of accrued interest. Furthermore, the annual payments becoming due on the new principal from the very beginning of the agreement contained a large element of interest payment.

This is in contrast to the settlements reached with other Danubian countries which had likewise incurred relief debts to the American Government at about the same time and for similar purposes. In these other funding arrangements the annuities provided for the years between 1924 and 1931 were all on account of the principal amount of indebtedness.

On the other hand, as a result of this difference in terms, of the $468,466.32 which the Hungarian government paid during these years, only $73,995.50 was applied to reduction of principal, the other $393,717.78 being charged as interest. Thus the nominal unpaid principal of the Hungarian debt now stands at a substantially higher total than it would had Hungary enjoyed the terms later granted to other Danubian countries.

Transfer Moratorium Decreed in Dec., 1931.

THE FAILURE of Hungary to effect payments to the United States under the terms of its debt contract had no relation whatsoever with the defaults of other debtors of the United States. In December, 1931, six months before the Hoover moratorium expired, the sudden withdrawal of foreign short-term credits completely exhausted the gold and foreign exchange reserve of the National Bank of Hungary and forced the government, in order to safeguard the financial stability of the country, to decree a transfer moratorium on all foreign debts.

The annuities due under the funding agreement of 1924 were included, however, by the Hungarian government in every budget passed by Parliament from 1932 to 1937, and on each payment date the United States Government was informed that in lieu of transfer, treasury bills in the national currency were deposited in its favor.

Since the summer of 1937 the Hungarian government has been emerging from the moratorium which for several years has interrupted payments on all kinds of Hungarian foreign debts to all classes of creditors in all parts of the world. Arrangements on a provisional and temporary basis have been worked out with various groups of creditors. Concurrently, a payment of $9,828.16 was made to the American Government on December 15, 1937.

Responsive to the repeated indications given by the American government to the effect "that this Government is fully disposed to discuss, through diplomatic channels, any proposals which your government may desire to put forward in regard to the payment of this indebtedness and to assure you that such proposals would receive careful consideration with a view to eventual submission to the American Congress," the Hungarian government is now prepared to offer to the United States Government to pay in full the total original amount borrowed.

It therefore tentatively formulates for the consideration of the American Government a possible basis of a new debt arrangement between the two countries to replace the debt agreement of 1924 and accruals thereunder.

Cites Possible Bases For New Debt Settlement.

THE FORMS and terms for effecting this new settlement which are under consideration as the basis of a possible offer to the American Government are as follows:

(a) That all payments hitherto made by the Hungarian government under the debt settlement of 1924 to the United States (approximate amount $478,000) should be recalculated as credited against original principal ($1,685,000).

(b) That the original principal ($1,685,000) of the amount borrowed less the preceding amount paid ($478,000) or $1,207,000, be paid in full in a series of annuities.

(c) The sum total of these annuities shall be equal to this reduced principal and shall be in the form of dated non-interest-bearing notes falling due at specified dates. These annuities shall run for a period of approximately 30 years (and hence each would be approximately in the amount of $39,000).

3. The Hungarian government wishes to point out that the sum total of these annuities, taken together with amounts previously paid by the Hungarian government under the debt agreement of 1924, would be identical with the whole original amount borrowed, and thus represent an exact and full discharge of the debt.

Offer Approximates Austrian Deal Is Claim.

THE HUNGARIAN government hopes all the more that this offer will prove acceptable to the American government as it very closely approximates the basis for payment annuities already accepted in the Austrian settlement of May 8, 1930, for the discharge of a relief indebtedness of the same character and referring to a country whose capacity to pay can hardly be considered inferior to that of Hungary.

In announcing the signature of said agreement with Austria, the Treasury Department stated that "The settlement compares favorably with the settlements made by the United States with the governments of Greece, Italy and Yugoslavia."

The Hungarian offer would be even more favorable to the United States Government, as, in contrast to the terms of the Austrian settlement, the Hungarian government offers complete repayment of its relief obligation within the present generation.

British Institute Finds England in Favor of League

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 23.—In England's present cabinet crisis observers everywhere are wondering whether British public opinion supports Anthony Eden, the White Knight of the League of Nations, or Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, who favors a deal with the fascist powers now outside the League.

One bit of evidence comes from a poll on the League conducted in England by the British Institute of Public Opinion in January.

The British institute found British voters still in favor of the League, but that pro-League sentiment has dropped off sharply since the "peace ballot" conducted by Lord Cecil in 1935.

Following is a comparison of the results:

Should Great Britain remain a member of the League of Nations?

Sinclair Lewis, world-famous novelist and Nobel Prize winner, will speak in Constitution Hall tonight at 8:30.

The red-haired Minnesotan, whose "Babbitt," "Main Street" and "The Man Who Knew Coolidge" were among the works which placed him with American literature's immortals, will take as his topic "How to Make Friends Go Like the Wind."

Object of his talk will be a satirical indictment of the recent deluge of "self improvement" books. Lewis will arrive in Washington this morning.

His address will be under auspices of the Washington Forum.

A Parallel?

By Barnet Nover.

M. Delcasse And Mr. Eden.

THE ACTION of Neville Chamberlain in throwing Anthony Eden overboard to make possible a deal with Mussolini recalls the parallel action taken by the French government a generation ago in forcing out Theophile Delcasse—to make possible a deal with the Kaiser.

For Mr. Chamberlain, the parallel is anything but a happy one. In the first place the Franco-German deal that followed the overthrow of Delcasse in 1905 led to nothing but a temporary truce. As Delcasse correctly predicted, France's capitulation had the effect of making Germany "more insolent and more exacting than ever."

But what is more important, Delcasse's resignation was interpreted in France as an action taken at the behest of a foreign power. And as this interpretation came more and more to be accepted in France, antagonism to Germany grew. The overthrow of Delcasse was regarded by Frenchmen in the years after 1905 as an insult which could not be forgotten or forgiven. As one popular French history written in 1910 put it:

Whatever one may think of Delcasse, the man of Fashoda and the servile executor of the English will, it is certain that to disavow him and force him out of office at such a moment was to capitulate before Germany. It meant inflicting on our country the most cruel humiliation.

• • • •

TECHNICALLY, of course, Delcasse was not forced out at Germany's behest. Nor has Eden been forced out at Mussolini's or Hitler's behest. But already what was said regarding Delcasse is being said and with great vehemence regarding Eden.

After all, the fact cannot be ignored that on the very day of Eden's resignation the British foreign secretary was singled out for attack by Hitler. And immediately following his resignation Italy appeared more willing to accept the British view regarding evacuation of volunteers from Spain than it did before.

This does not mean that Mussolini asked for Eden's head as the sine qua non of an Anglo-Italian deal. But in popular belief the shade of difference between an actual Fascist ultimatum to get rid of Eden, which Chamberlain no doubt would have rejected, and the kind of indirect pressure on Britain which forced Eden's resignation will be ignored. It was certainly ignored in France in considering what happened to Delcasse.

• • • •

BETWEEN EDEN and Delcasse, the differences are infinitely greater than the similarities.

Delcasse was par-excellence the prewar statesman. He thought in terms of balance of power, of secret deals and military alliances. Eden embodies in himself all that is best of the post-war ideal of a world made warless by the collective action of all peace-loving nations.

Delcasse belonged to the generation of Frenchmen who knew Sedan, who remembered the lost provinces of Alsace-Lorraine and who harbored in their souls the bitter memory of a triumphant German army parading through Paris.

Eden is a man who belongs to the generation which paid the price for the Kaisers and Delcasses and Isvolskys and Berchtolds of the past.

Delcasse did for France in the field of foreign affairs what Bismarck had done for Germany. Under Bismarck, Germany enjoyed an almost unbroken hegemony. At the height of his power the Iron Chancellor could boast that he had won to Germany's side either by means of an alliance or through friendship Austria-Hungary, Russia, Italy and Great Britain. It was Delcasse as much as any man who destroyed that hegemony.

Delcasse first became foreign minister of France in 1898. Then, as now, French governments came and went. For seven years Delcasse stayed at his post and during that time France made peace with Great Britain, weakened Italy's adherence to the Triple Alliance, won over Spain and paved the way for a rapprochement between Great Britain and Russia.

• • • •

NOT SURPRISINGLY the German leaders hated and feared him. For they hated and feared his work, in particular the Anglo-French entente of which he was a principal architect. And it was to test out that entente and if possible to smash it that Germany decided in 1905 to raise the Moroccan issue, one of the key points of the Anglo-French settlement.

The French premier at the time of the Moroccan crisis was Maurice Rouvier. He was preeminently a man of peace—at almost any price. He believed France could co-operate with the Kaiser's Germany without in any degree weakening the republic's new-found link with Britain or sacrificing any of her own interests. Delcasse, as Charles W. Porter, one of his recent biographers, points out, "held out for positive guarantees." It is the Eden note.

In the ensuing struggle Rouvier had the support of his cabinet and of the Chamber. But Rouvier's victory proved in the long run an empty one. In a few years the Moroccan compromise achieved at Algeciras, a compromise made possible by Rouvier's acquiescence to German demands, fell to the ground and once again Europe was on the verge of war.

And in a few years, too, Delcasse was back in power—this time as foreign minister.

Harvard Reading Machine.

Learn to read slow; all other graces
Will follow in their proper places.

ONE WONDERS what the Rev. William Walker, who wrote those lines nearly 100 years ago, would think of the apparatus recently set up in a Harvard laboratory. At first thought it disputes his dictum. Here a paragraph is projected on a screen, print made visible, but with word groups emphasized in turn so that the reading eye involuntarily concerns itself with more than one word at a time.

"With its successive flashes," says a description of this mechanism, "the film duplicates the technique of fast readers accurately yet flexibly. For example, it has been found that readers generally make a longer pause at the start of a line and after punctuation marks, especially periods, than at other times. The film reproduces these slight variations." So may "slow but intelligent readers learn how to take eyefuls of printed words after the manner of skillful readers."

• • • •

ONE MAY DOUBT that Mr. Walker would have liked the expression "eyefuls of words;" it suggests a gulp. It may also be believed that by reading slow he meant reading intelligently—which is undoubtedly the objective of the educators. As a reader emerges from the blank of illiteracy he reads one word at a time; but it is safe to say that both Mr. Walker and Sir Francis Bacon practiced a reading technique (though without thinking of it as such) very much like that visualized by the Harvard machine.

Shortening The Inch.

The House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures has reported out a bill which will rectify a difference between British and American inches which is called "intolerable." The British inch measures 25.39996 millimeters. The American inch equals 25.40005 millimeters. The whole vast law making machinery of Congress is being set in motion to bring the American inch down to the British figure. No party lines are recognized in this case; Old Guard and New Dealers see eye to eye. The extra two millionths of the American inch must go!

Director Lyman J. Briggs, of the Bureau of Standards, is the one who calls this pair of extra millionths "intolerable." With the scientist's eye for the infinitesimal, he is lobbying vigorously for his legislation reforming the inch, as well as a clause defining the weight of a pound. However, he tells industry, there is no need to scrap any of its hair-fine instruments of measurement, for the change will make no practical difference; from industry's standpoint, it will be "tolerable." The layman, in fact, needn't give a hoot about the new dwarf inch. Or even two millionths of a hoot.

Tom McCarthy

Backstage With Cornelia Otis Skinner.

"DON'T ASK HER if she's married," said Mr. Smith, Cornelia Otis Skinner's manager. In fact everyone backstage at the National, where Miss Skinner is appearing in "Edna, His Wife," had advice about what I shouldn't ask her.

McCARTHY.

"Don't ask her about her children, or if she has any," said Miss Skinner's maid.

"Don't ask her any foolish questions," said Mr. Blodgett, who is a banker, and Miss Skinner's husband.

But it really wasn't a funny thing. It was simply that they were all gathering in a sort of hands-around, to protect Miss Skinner from that which is known as the press.

There was reason enough for it. Miss Skinner, in her solo drama, in which she plays all the roles, had just finished her third performance in two days. And everybody was gathered around to protect her.

After all it isn't easy work to hold the center of the stage for two hours, play all the parts, and impersonate a half dozen people.

"You know," said Miss Skinner's maid, "this is so tiring for her. But always she is so sweet-tempered. She is very nice to work for. I have worked with her for eight years."

And Miss Skinner's maid, who is a plump, genteel, gray-haired woman, poured me a cup of the coffee which is always made during the performance for the stage hands.

"No," said the maid, running her hands down the sides of her black dress, "I never worked with stage actresses before. And "she wrinkled her nose with something like disgust, "I wouldn't work with half of them, anyhow!"

• • • •

THEN Mr. Blodgett came in and told me some more things I shouldn't ask Miss Skinner. But the maid gave the whole thing away by calling Miss Skinner, Mrs. Blodgett.

And Mr. Smith, the manager, took me out and showed me the lights and the sets used during the performance, and it was explained how in one scene the effect of upsetting an excursion boat is achieved.

Miss Skinner stands with her hands on the rail of the boat and suddenly it begins to tip. From the audience it appears that a whole hinged set is overturning. What actually happens is that Miss Skinner pushes the rail toward the audience and lights are thrown against it to shadow the back-drop. This gives the impression that the whole set is falling.

Actually it's just Miss Skinner pushing over the rail and a moving shadow on the back-drop. The "hinged set" is really "3 cents worth of light."

After they'd got through filling me with coffee, explaining what shouldn't be asked, and showing me the sets, Miss Skinner was ready to be interviewed. And then I understood the care which had been taken.

• • • •

SHE SAT in her dressing room rubbing off the make-up with cold cream and a towel, and while her movements were brisk, there was a bit of tiredness in them.

"Not very glamorous," she said, as she rubbed her face with the towel, and the maid pushed a glass of dark stout toward her. She took time off to sip it.

"I always like a glass of stout after the performance," she said. "It acts as a sort of a pick-up."

And then, because I couldn't ask any personal questions, I could only notice her dressing table, and that it had pictures of children on it. And there was one snapshot of a cute little tyke of about 3. The young 'un was as nude as "September Morn" and had a nice head of blonde hair and looked pretty and happy.

"I just sort of drifted into the solo drama," Miss Skinner said, brushing her long black hair. "I used to do little stunts at parties and then I tried the stage. Well, I didn't seem to be making much headway on the stage in the regular plays so I tried it alone." She took time out for another sip of stout, and didn't need to add that she had succeeded in playing alone.

Since Miss Skinner writes her own plays, sometimes adapting them from books, she has an author's as well as an actor's viewpoint. She has a literate and vocal sympathy with her characters. She has very real feelings about "Edna," whom she is portraying this week.

Edna is a well-meaning, if not inspired, person, who has one real quality . . . loyalty.

"I feel sorry for her," Miss Skinner said, and her brow wrinkled with seriousness. "She is a typical corn-belter. And so am I! But she is really a dull woman. That doesn't make her any less tragic."

Miss Skinner feels that she has achieved something in making a "dull woman interesting."

As an actress her greatest resentment is toward collegiate interviewers and coughers in the audience.

"These audiences have been fine," she said, "but I can understand why Paderewski walked out on concerts when the people began to cough. My dad (the famous Otis Skinner) used to call such audiences the disciples of St. Larynx."

At that moment the door of the dressing room swung open, and there was another request for an autograph, or an introduction.

Miss Skinner looked actually terrified, and a little hurt. She was deadly tired, and here was something else again.

"No," she said, before the request had been fully explained. And she shook her head.

"What do they think I am," she said, draining the last of the stout, "a street accident?"

"That's what I don't like," she said. "People want to see me just because they recognize the name. They're just curious. They want to give me the same attention they give an accident in the street."

Committee of 100 Backs Zoning Bill

The executive committee of the Committee of 100 on the Federal City yesterday announced its indorsement of the King bill to bring up to date the Capital's zoning laws.

Introduced February 1 by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, one of the features of the measure is the creation of an adjustment board similar to those in other progressive cities.

The board would have the authority to waive or modify requirements in individual cases to obviate hardships to owners of land which might arise from a technical enforcecent of the zoning regulations.

Present at the meeting, held at the Cosmos Club, of the executive committee were Charles F. Consaul, vice chairman; Dr. Theodore S. Palmer, Frank P. Leetch, Joshua Evans, E. C. Graham, Charles Eliot 2d and Evan Tucker.

Auto Inspection Inquirers Named

Four District officials yesterday were appointed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to study conditions relative to the inspection of motor vehicles in the District.

The study will include the number and location of inspection stations, whether such stations should be constructed or rented by the District, and the cost of equipment and necessary operating personnel.

The committee consists of District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, chairman; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; W. A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, and E. A. Dent, District surveyor.

Under the provisions of the inspection act, already approved, private automobiles will be inspected once each year—the initial cost $1 and the succeeding yearly fee 50 cents. District and Federal Government-owned cars will be inspected twice each year without cost. Donovan said a $150,000 limit had been set for the entire set-up.

'I Am My Youth' Will Be Given Premiere Here

Next Week's Theater Bills Include Fine Pictures, Ace Stage Stars.

The premiere of "I Am My Youth," the new play based on the romantic life of the poet Shelley, by Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum, will be celebrated in the National Theater next Monday night. The principal roles will be played by Frank Lawton, Charles Waldron and Viola Roache, with a splendid cast in support. The drama also hinges largely upon the life of the English man of letters, William Godwin, whose household Shelley joined at the turn of the nineteenth century. There were three daughters in the Godwin home and the family was as noted for its defiance of the social conventions as for its literary output. Linda Watkins, Gordon Richards, Sylvia Weld, Arden Young and Robert Vivian are importantly assigned. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Seats now are on sale at the box office.

W. C. Fields, in association with Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Shirley Ross, Ben Blue, Bob Hope, Lynne Overman, Rufe Davis, Leif Erikson and Grace Bradley, will return to the local screen tomorrow as star of Paramount's production of "The Big Broadcast of 1938" at the Earle Theater. Special, entertainment numbers also are contributed to this film by Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company; Shep Fields and his "Rippling Rhythm Orchestra," and Tito Guizar, popular radio artist. On the stage, the vaudeville bill will be headlined by that sneezing comic of the films, Billy Gilbert, in person. Others on the living program will include Bryant, Rains and Young, "dancers decidedly different;" Paul Gordon, "the prince of wheels;" the Sinclair Sisters, and Carole Manners, "the California songbird."

"Arsene Lupin Returns," signalizing the rehabilitation of a popular figure of detective fiction, will be the principal screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The foremost roles are in the capable hands of Melvyn Douglas, Warren William and Virginia Bruce. The story, of course, is one of mystery in which many baffling incidents are disclosed to the audience and eventually solved by the players on the screen. The stage bill for the new week will be headlined by Major Bowes' "Second Anniversary Revue," in which have been assembled the star performers who have "clicked" during hundreds of the major's broadcasts. The bill will be completed by the Fox Movietone News and orchestral contributions under the baton of Phil Lampkin.

Glen Morris and Eleanor Holm are the pictured costars in "Tarzan's Revenge," announced as principal screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater. George Barbier, C. Henry Gordon and Hedda Hopper, Post columnist, are prominently cast in supporting roles in this subject, said to be one of the most exciting in the Tarzan series. The bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and full, composite newsreel.

Having registered emphatically with the public as its star's best picture to date, "A Yank at Oxford," with Robert Taylor in the title role, will be held over for a second week, beginning tomorrow, at Loew's Palace Theater. In this enlivening subject, Taylor is surrounded by an excellent cast, prominent in which are Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Vivien Leigh, Claude Gillingwater, Edmund Gwenn, Tully Marshall and a considerable group of able British players not so well known on this side. The short subjects also will be retained, with a new issue of the "News of the Day" supplanting the old.

With constantly mounting patronage marking the engagement of Walt Disney's superb Technicolor production of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," that amazing subject will be continued through a third week at RKO-Keith's. Following the run of this superlative picture, the attraction on Fifteenth street will be "Bringing Up Baby," a new comedy costarring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant.

The new week's bill at the Tran-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, will be featured by a natural color travelog devoted to the beauties of El Salvador, the picturesque country of Central America; a thrilling short subject, dealing with life in Lapland, and a new Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy. The bill, according to custom, will be based on newsreel coverage of the world.

Cecil B. De Mille's silver anniversary production of "The Buccanner," with Fredric March in the title role, supported by Akim Tamiroff, Franciska Gaal and a host of other distinguished players, will return to F street tomorrow for a week's engagement as chief photoplay feature of the bill at Loew's Columbia Theater. This is one of De Mille's most impressive productions and offers a series of episodes that are as imposing in magnitude as they are thrilling in content. The bill will be completed by the usual short-reel features and a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Winner of the Paris Exposition's highest cinema award last year, "Peter the First," Amkino's most pretentious production, will be accorded its first Washington presentation for the week beginning Sunday at the Little Theater. This picturization of the novel by Alexei Tolstoy is said to differ from other Soviet releases in that it embodies no propaganda for the present Stalin regime. The picture enlists the services of a cast totaling some 5,000 players. There will be no advance in prices for this premiere engagement.

Maxwell Anderson's play of "Elizabeth the Queen," will be presented tonight at 8:15 in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest, under the auspices of the Community Center Department. Ann Ives, one of the foremost of resident actresses, is starred in this production. Miss Ives, needless to say, will be seen in the title role. She will be supported in the major male roles by J. Francis Buckley and Larry Lawrence.

That pounding you hear o' nights in the vicinity of the Gayety Theater is caused by the hammers of the extra backstage crew hired by Manager Collins to shore up the stage against the coming of the overweight chorus to the Ninth street house on Sunday with the "Bandbox Revue." Alice Murphy's Quintuplets, not one under 250 pounds in weight, will be featured in this new show, opening with the usual Sunday matinee. The featured principals will be Bobby Morris, comedian, and Sunya "Smiles" Slayne, display artiste.

THERE is more to this little Sonja Henie person than meets the consciousness of the casual spectator, if not the eye.

This must have been borne in upon the boys and girls of the drama desks who attended yesterday afternoon's preview of her latest Twentieth Century-Fox starring vehicle, "Happy Landing," in the pillbox projection room of the ditto film exchange, of whom, unfortunately, I was not one. But even without having been there, I have it from Miss Henie's own slightly pursed lips that "Happy Landing," in her estimation, at least, is the best picture she has made. In it she is reunited with Don Ameche for the first time since "One in a Million," which was a pretty good picture on its own account as well as account of because Mr. Ameche was in it.

BELL.

"Happy Landing" is a little more musicalized than some of the earlier Henie fillums have been. There are five song numbers in it that give the star something to make love and skate to—"Hot and Happy," "A Gypsy Told Me," "You Are the Music to the Words in My Heart," "Yonny and His Oompah" and "You Appeal to Me."

But what I started out to say was that Sonja Henie possesses certain inborn capabilities that are just a bit on the freakish side. You must have seen her spin like a top during her evolutions on ice and wondered how she ever managed to come out of the whirligig right side up. When she was at the Shoreham, the evening after having received the royal decoration from her crown at the legation, she explained to this column that no matter how long she spins on the narrow blades of skate she never gets dizzy. This seems almost incomprehensible to one who cannot turn a corner swiftly without growing a little giddy.

I presume some learned scientist could explain the whole business in terms of glands, ear ducts, balance, coordination, mental detachment and all that sort of thing, but it still wouldn't make too much sense to these ears. How a wee slip of a girl can go into a first-rate imitation of a pinwheel and then stop short without a quiver or a stagger to betray how befuddled she is, merely adds up to a phenomenon on my slate.

Quite obviously there is some peculiar natural physical endowment that makes a champion. Otherwise, we all would be champions or there wouldn't be any at all. That last contingency would be just too bad. In that case we wouldn't have any Sonja Henie coming to the screen at the Palace in "Happy Landing" as soon as "A Yank at Oxford" graduates!

And while we are on the topic of "human tops," this seems as good a time as any to reiterate that Gloria Gilbert, the remarkable toe-dancer appearing as specialist with Will Osborne's "Slide Orchestra" at the Earle, seems equally equipped with a marvelous ability to walk straight after she has spun around on her toe until equilibrium takes on something the color of a miracle. Revolving doors must not hold very many terrors for these strange young women.

As a further eloquent commentary upon the stern grip Cornelia Otis Skinner has taken upon the imagination of local theatergoers in "Edna His Wife," her own una-drama derived from the novel by Margaret Ayer Barnes, it deserves to be recorded that yesterday's matinee at the National Theater, like the Tuesday Washington Birthday matinee, was sold out and cash customers were standing in the back of the house to watch the diversified performance of the theater's foremost solo artiste, who finds it possible to people a play completely by the power of implication and suggestion.

Since the days when she appeared here only on a vagrant Sabbath afternoon and evening as a "one-night stand" attraction, I think Miss Skinner never has enjoyed such an immediate response to her artistry as this week is writing into the books. It is a tribute to her unique ability that is richly deserved. My congratulations go in equal measure to Miss Skinner and the discriminating sense of resident admirers of the best that is to be found in the theater.

The Latin-American scene evidently has changed since I rambled around the West Indies and South America back in that earlier incarnation. Comes another pretty postcard from Caracas, Venezuela, from that stalwart varieteer, Dr. Archie D. Engel, who is following a familiar trail with C. H. Dikeman, Washington restaurateur, which says: "Just paid 45 cents, American, for a ham sandwich and 10 cents for this postal. This place would break the bank of England—everything very high. But a beautiful ride up here; even better than you described." That would be from La Guayra, seaport of Caracas, up over a spur of the Andes to the capital, a trip that covers something like 42 miles of narrow-guage railroad track to reach a point that is only 16 miles distant as the crow flies. When I was there, postcards were a penny and they practically threw ham sandwiches right into your teeth—ham sandwiches being something that the natives looked upon as a sort of carrion not fit for human consumption. Time marches on, as the man says!

Another postcard of Gary Cooper's home in Brentwood, Calif., bearing the legend "This is where I do NOT live," arrives from Mark Silver, one of United Artists' representatives in Washington, who goes on to say that the sunshine is living up to the best blurbs of the California chambers of commerce and that he will have some news for me when he returns to town.

One construes this to mean that Mark has sold that synopsis of a film play that was the mainspring of his trip to the coast. I hope he has, because I have a better one in the back of my skull—I hope.

Last night's presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Rialto Theater was not as simple a matter as might appear upon the surface. Almost a quarter-century after the original release of this David Wark Griffith masterpiece, the ugly head of censorship reared itself in the faces of the sponsors of the showing and it was necessary to screen the picture for Maj. Brown, of the Metropolitan Police Department, the district attorney and the corporation counsel before it could be determined that the complaints lodged against the film were not too soundly founded. It all seems a little grotesque.

Appears as Shelley in New Play

brilliant young English actor, who in private life is the husband of Evelyn Laye, seen here recently in the "command performance" of "Between the Devil," who comes to the stage of the National Theater next week in one of the principal roles in "I Am My Youth," the new play by Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum. Mr. Lawton will be remembered as the adult David Copperfield in the film of that name, in which Freddie Bartholomew was the juvenile star in the title role.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

Miami Beach, Feb. 23.

JIM FARLEY, who arrived here last week-end, was asked about the "Draft-Farley-for-Governor" movement. "Stop that talk," Mrs. Farley interposed. "I won't have my Jim running for Governor" . . . Charles Michaelson, publicity chief for the Democratic National Committee, declared that he's busying himself now in preparation for the 1940 campaign and that he's satisfied with the groundwork already set . . . Herbert Bayard Swope, who watched War Admiral run at Hialeah Saturday, stated that he now is working on the unification of New York's transit system. "Hialeah is a strange place to be working on it," a heckler suggested. "Well," Swope replied, "they used to say I edited the World from Belmont Race Track—and that wasn't a bad job."

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr., has become reconciled with his father—who has removed all opposition to his son's labors . . . Young Vanderbilt went to Chicago last week and lectured upon his interview with Stalin. After this discourse upon Russia and its dictator he flew to Miami Beach—for a rest, upon his father's magnificent yacht! . . . Dave Wilentz, New Jersey's attorney general who prosecuted Hauptmann, insists that, unlike his colleagues and political superiors, he won't write a book about the case . . . Application will be made this week to change the official name, "Roddy Burdine Memorial Stadium," to "The Orange Bowl Stadium."

MAX SCHUSTER, of Simon & Schuster, the publishers, is leaving soon for his ranch near Hollywood. "Will you visit Hollywood?" he was asked. "Why?" the publisher replied. "Does anyone there read books?" . . . Jim Wilson, former assistant district attorney for New York County, has written a brief attacking Tom Dewey's blue-ribbon juries . . . The dowager Aimee Lyman Phillips, who is 70 and weighs almost 250 pounds, is being escorted to the Patio and Colony clubs in Palm Beach by Ted Peckham, of the Escort Service . . . Nancy Carroll and Eric Linden are being groomed for appearances in the Coast production of Clifford Odets' "Golden Boy."

THE MIAMI NEWSPAPERS last week front-paged a photo showing a railway engine breaking through a snowdrift in Dunsmuir, Calif. The gleeful caption was "California Here We Come!" The weather-proud and overzealous Miami editors neglected to mention that Dunsmuir is almost 700 miles north of Hollywood and, comparatively, almost is as far north as Trenton, N. J. . . . Palm Beach royalty is feuding among itself. Prince Scherbaton, Prince George and Prince Mikhail Gourdoroff won't speak to Prince Odescalchi and Count Costagnala—because the latter two actually are working at jobs.

TONNY CANZONERI confided yesterday that he plans another comeback—but not as a lightweight. He now weighs 152 pounds . . . Horace Dodge, the auto manufacturer, will live in England next year. He told some of his friends that night that it will require more than ten months' work to rebuild a home he has purchased in London . . . Lee Shubert, the producer, is completing arrangements for the scripts to be used in the new Ziegfeld Follies. Fred Allen will be asked to write the sketches.

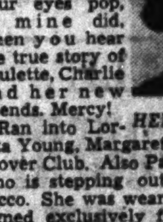
MAYOR FRANK HAGUE of Jersey City states that he will return from his self-imposed exile this week. Regarding Senator Milton's visit to see him—leaving New Jersey without senatorial representation—Hague told me: "You'll find a lot of States without senatorial representation." And concerning the C. I. O.'s request for police protection during their parade through his city Sunday, the mayor's only comment was "That's pretty good" . . . Patricia Kirkland, daughter of Playwright Jack Kirkland—who arrived here this week—insisted upon seeing "Of Mice and Men." Even Broderick Crawford, who portrays "Lennie," couldn't dissuade her. The youngster finally saw the play and was rushed to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs"—as a chaser.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 23.—Mercy, how Paulette Goddard's stock has risen since her new Selznick contract. I met her at a party today dressed in shining silver from head to toe. All she needed was a sword to look like Joan of Arc.



HEDDA HOPPER.

And won't your eyes pop, as mine did, when you hear the true story of Paulette, Charlie and her new friends. Mercy!

Ran into Loretta Young, Margaret Lindsay at the Clover Club. Also Paulette Goddard who is stepping out with Pat de Cicco. She was wearing a gown designed exclusively for Sun Valley. A tight tube of black crepe from the waist to the floor, topped with a bright red, hand-kit sweater with puffed sleeves.

Mrs. John Considine, the producer's wife, was wearing a similar model, only hers was sky blue. With that she wore a gold necklace and bracelet made of tiny flat fishes close together. Joan Crawford returned from New York with the same model in every color, but none of these girls have been to Sun Valley.

Too bad Sam Goldwyn couldn't have released "Marco Polo" in the winter. Gary Cooper's dress-up clothes would be frightfully becoming to adventure seeking ladies. I tried to buy his sable-trimmed velvet topcoat and jeweled Chinese hat. I know no man, except Gary Cooper—on or off the screen—who could get away with it.

Paris is trying to put one over again by slipping the waistline down to the hips, where they had it some time ago. It was hideous and unflattering. And would prevent making over your last year's dresses.

Paris is hard put to it thinking up original ideas. They've just sent over a perky pointed turban, made from silk printed with scenes from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Last year they sold thousands of bolts of printed silk with Hollywood scenes and stars' signatures.

Prices

resolution adopted by the commission.

Percy Tetlow, a member of the commission, said the action was taken because of court orders suspending prices for certain consumers. Minimum prices have been set aside by court order for a majority of railroads, the City of Cleveland, the Associated Industries of New York and other large industrial consumers.

A formal order revoking the 30,000 minimum prices marketing rules and regulations will be entered tomorrow, and new schedules will be established as soon as possible, Tetlow said. He said the commission felt relief should be extended to all consumers to protect those not granted relief by the courts.

General suspension of the price schedules had been recommended by major coal operators and ranking officials of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers. Operators and union leaders were said to have favored suspension so the commission could re-establish its schedules to withstand legal attacks. The commission has been charged with failure to conduct "adequate" hearings before promulgation of rates.

Industrial Prices Raised.

Designed to "stabilize conditions surrounding production and distribution of coal," the commission's price schedule generally lowered prices on household grades of coal while increasing them on industrial and locomotive grades.

The Senate Commerce Committee's earlier move for a Senate investigation of the whole price structure, and its possible relation to the present business recession, followed increasing emphasis by the President on price irregularities and the need for "balance."

The proposed price inquiry would indirectly cut across lines of two other Senate studies. Senate Judiciary Committee hearings have been ordered on the new Borah-O'Mahoney bill designed to regulate monopolistic practices. On Monday Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, will resume hearings before his unemployment committee on the cause and cure of the present recession. Bernard Baruch, New York financier, and other witnesses will be heard on the relation of so-called "sticky" prices to the recession.

Borah Backs Price Study.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, indorsed the idea of a Commerce Committee price investigation. Borah said "there is a network of forces which are fixing prices paid consumers" and "we never can get back to normal business activity as long as monopolistic price-fixing continues." O'Mahoney predicted Bailey's proposed investigation would disclose monopolistic practices that would increase support for the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal licensing bill.

Bailey said the Commerce Committee inquiry, for which $25,000 was asked, should cover cost of food, clothing, building material, farm implements, electricity and "rates of taxes."

"I would expect the committee to investigate the entire field of price, with a view to ascertaining whether there is a disparity between prices paid for raw materials, prices for labor and prices charged the consumer," said the North Carolinian, who recently prepared the declaration of conservative principles known as "The Address to the American People."

To Study Profit Base.

"Necessarily we would investigate profit. * * * I want to know just what the profit base is." He said the group should try "to determine whether the assumption that profits are too great or that prices are too high or too low is well founded in fact."

Chairman Royal S. Copeland, of the Commerce committee, said "some Senators are tired of hearing first that prices are too high and then that prices are too low." The President, at press conferences from time to time, has pointed out that certain prices are out of line both ways and has stressed need for adjustments.

John Adams' Rites Scheduled Today

Requiem mass will be said for John M. Adams, retired Navy Yard machinist, at 9 a. m. today at St. Peter's Church, Second and C streets southeast. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Adams died Monday at his home, 256 Eighth street southeast.

A native of Washington, he entered the Government service after graduating from local schools. He retired in 1929, after serving 46 years.

He was a member of the original Washington Light Infantry, Columbia Lodge of Machinists Union and the Holy Name Society of St. Peter's Church.

Survivors are his widow, Mrs. Jennie C. Adams; a daughter, Mrs Levin P. Handy; a son, John H. Adams, jr., and four grandchildren, all of this city.

Mrs. Mary Britton Rites Set Today

Mrs. Mary Britton, 86, who died Tuesday, will be buried today in Oak Hill Cemetery, following services at 11 a. m. at her home, 1848 Kalorama road northwest.

Mrs. Britton was the widow of Alexander T. Britton, organizer and first president of the American Security & Trust Co. and member of the law firm of Britton & Gray.

Born in Providence, R. I., Mrs. Britton came to Washington following her marriage in 1869. She had been active in the old Peirce Guild, and in work for the Washington Home for Foundlings.

Surviving are two sons, William Lee Britton and John Britton; a daughter, Mrs. Arthur D. Carpenter; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Bell Galt; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all of Washington.

Sister Robert Dies; Rites in Montreal

Sister Mary Robert, a teacher in the eighth grade of St. Michael's Parish School at Silver Spring, Md., died Monday at Georgetown Hospital after an illness of three weeks.

A former teacher at St. Gabriel's School in Washington, Sister Robert came to St. Michael's School three and one-half years ago. She was a member of the order of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

Relief

Senate Reorganization Committee study, will be offered to the bill.

Amendment Passed.

The relief appropriation approved yesterday carried one noteworthy amendment lifting monthly restrictions on WPA spending imposed by the so-called Woodrum amendment on the initial $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation. On motion of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, the Senate refused to require apportionment of the emergency fund.

Other major amendments, including proposals to slash or to increase the sum, were defeated.

A futile fight was made by Senator Bailey to force local communities to put up 25 per cent of the cost of work projects where able to do so and contribute 20 per cent of direct relief outlays. Bailey's amendment was voted down, 25 to 47.

Defeat followed indications by Senator Byrnes that his special Senate Unemployment Committee will bring out recommendations to increase local relief responsibility in connection with the regular $1,000,000,000 relief appropriation for next year. Several Senators who opposed the change, including Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said they would reserve final judgment until the Unemployment Committee's findings are revealed.

"Congress should express some disposition to exercise some control over the public money we are spending," said George. "This amendment merely seeks to condition work projects upon some fair contribution by local communities.

Big Cities to Get Most.

Bailey charged the bulk of the relief money would be spent in "perhaps half a dozen great cities" and that workers in some Southern States earning as little as $40 a month are being taxed to pay "$50 to $80 a month to people on relief." He said six States, New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, California, Ohio and Massachusetts have received three-eighths of relief funds.

"If we had the revenue, I would feel better about it," said Bailey. "The Federal revenue is going down, not up. Expenditures of the Government are increasing. Local communities should take more responsibility for relief. The hour is coming when they probably will have to look altogether to themselves, if we go on as we are going."

Defeated along with the Bailey amendment was a proposal by Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, permitting local sponsors to make their contributions either in materials or funds.

A labor amendment by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, was defeated by a voice vote. It would have sanctioned workers employed on WPA contracts to organize and bargain collectively under the national labor relations act.

Wagner explained his amendment would not affect WPA workers employed directly by WPA, but only those employed by private contractors using WPA funds. Defeat followed assertion by Senator Byrnes that WPA money is not spent under such contracts.

Flood Aid Granted.

As the $250,000,000 special fund neared enactment, President Roosevelt made $17,419,862 of relief funds available for use in 31 States if local emergencies develop as a result of spring floods. WPA officials said the allocations made "adequate provision to enable States to act promptly when an emergency arises." Maryland, hard hit by floods in recent years, would receive $204,266 of the money if flood exigences develop.

Deputy Works Progress Administrator Williams told Congressional committees the $250,000,000 approved by the Senate yesterday will enable WPA to take care of only 500,000 of the 750,000 he estimated are in "immediate need of work relief."

"Another 250,000 unemployed, willing and able to work, and in a destitute condition, exist in areas where relief offices, direct relief offices, do not exist and further relief cannot by granted," Williams said.

Indiana Booms Paul McNutt at Gigantic Reception

McNutt Hailed By Thousands In Lavish Scene

McNutt

(Democrat), Indiana, who staged the party with the aid of Indiana State officials, officers of the "Two-Per-Cent Club," and some gentlemen who described themselves as "just chums of the Commissioner."

"Fred" meant Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, opponent of the President's court reorganization bill, and now tossed overboard by the McNutt Indiana machine in the coming Senatorial election this autumn.

Van Nuys did not appear, nor did his wife, who had been slated to act as a "pouring hostess" at a coffee urn.

Roper Attends.

But Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper came, and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, a dozen Senators, a horde of Congressmen, and innumerable lesser lights, ranging all the way down the political scale to elevator boys from the Senate Office Building.

Yesterday's three-hour binge was without known Washington precedent. Rough, but official, estimates of its cost skirted around $3,500. The political wiseacres who attended termed it "either suicidal or marvelous," asserting that the party would either kill McNutt politically or make him overnight, depending on the popular reaction to an unofficial boom started more than two years before the Democratic nominating convention of 1940. All agreed "It's a bold stroke."

Press Wined, Dined.

The Indiana sponsors engineered the festivities in convention-hotel style, with two rooms set aside for the press. Both rooms had superb bar facilities, with unlimited Scotch, bourbon, and rye, potato chips, popcorn and little sausages available. One of the two rooms had a typewriter in it that a reporter had brought along. Both were jammed from 3 p. m. until the late evening.

He Stands Up Well.

McNutt, showing no visible signs of fatigue after his wearing day's handshaking, cut off the reception at 7:15 p. m., shortly after greeting William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor—the man who once denounced the Indianan for his repeated haste in calling out the State militia to break strikes.

The commissioner's full day began with his arrival at 7:50 a. m., and included a press conference at 10 a. m., visits with Secretary Woodring and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and finally the reception.

The reception line consisted of Senator and Mrs. Minton and McNutt. The commissioner, who was told frequently he would be the next President, came through strongly, but Minton, who was told only "hello," confessed after it was all over that he was very, very weary, as he dashed down to the 42-foot table to look in vain for a remaining delicacy. He contented himself with a dry doughnut and a half-cup of coffee, as a squad of the Mayflower's clean-up men descended on the formerly groaning board.

Old Timers Amazed.

Old-time politicians present—men who used to nominate candidates over a seidel of beer in a tavern back room—looked on with amazement as the mob descended on the free food and drinks in the huge ballroom.

M. Fred, the maitre d'hotel of the Mayflower, admitted seriously that yesterday's layout was his masterpiece. In a little press conference of his own he released the entire menu, interrupting it only to utter low ecstatic cries from time to time, with the well-known Gallic gesture in which the fingers are blown away from the lips in an airy kiss. This is what M. Fred laid down before the customers:

Two massive eight-layer cakes, 18 inches in diameter, one bearing the seal of the United States in delicate frosting and the other the seal of Indiana.

Five symbolic displays: the Washington Monument, Mount Vernon, a lighthouse, a yacht, and a pagoda.

Baskets of sweets, ranging from mints to chocolates; strawberry tarts (full pie-size); three kinds of cakes — gateaux diplomate, gateaux mille feuille and gateaux St. Honoree; patisserie Viennoise; and mignardises, which are specially-created small cakes (cookie-size) of a most exotic taste and appearance.

3 Kinds of Doughnuts.

Buffet delice Diana; croute au chaud; hot meat snaps; four kinds of canapes—caviar, smoked salmon, anchovy and pate do foie gras.

Petits cherry tomatoes stuffed with chicken salad; vol au vent in the siecle (pastry shells stuffed with chicken); three kinds of mousse—Smithfield ham, sweetbreads and pheasant; galantine of capon with salad Santa Maria; and hot-house grape salad.

Maryland biscuits with deviled ham; deviled eggs; sandwiches de luxe (M. Fred contented himself with this description of an almost indescribable variety of mouth-watering sandwiches); fresh strawberries, and

This spread was set out on more than 200 silver dishes and trays, with uncountable quantities of stuffed celery, olives (ripe, green and stuffed variously); a profusion of nuts; baskets of hothouse fruits of all sorts, and four great urns—two of silver and two of coffee, at which a revolving squad of hostesses presided in half-hour shifts. The decorations included tall red, white and blue candles in silver candelabra and great baskets (laundry-size) filled with creamy-tan giant gladiola, the rare black-purple Japanese iris; deep red roses; pussy-willow, ferns and smilax.

60-Foot Bar Set Up.

Across the hall from this display, in the Presidential dining room, a 60-foot bar was set up before 8 rows (11 chairs in a row) of back-to-back seats for citizens who wished to discuss the situation with more leisure. Here Manhattan and Martini cocktails were available, with great bowls of a punch compounded of [illegible] Brugal rum, lime, lemon and pineapple-juice, with halved strawberries swimming gently in its midst.

The theory, as expounded by one Indianan present, was this: "First they shake the next President's hand. Next they stuff themselves to the hinges with these horse-doovers things. If they still don't react, they can cross the hall and mellow up on the light drinks. Then, if they're not softened up after that, we take 'em upstairs and work on 'em with the real stuff."

But staggering as was the food display, the guests and the press alike were more impressed by the ease with which McNutt handled himself. Closely examined by reporters on his aspirations, he smiled steadily as he ducked, dodged and weaved his way through a lengthy grilling.

He said: "Why talk about 1940 when we have immediate problems . . . I've never quit on a job before, and I'm going to stay in the Philippines as long as I'm needed there . . . It is for President Roosevelt to say whether he wants a third term . . . I have no comment on the transfer of Col. Davenport Johnson, who flew me to Denver from San Francisco, other than that I never met him before I saw him in the cockpit, and that my salary comes from the War Department's appropriation . . . My Indiana friends have never put me out on a limb."

The latter answer came to questions about the possible prematureness of his Presidential boom.

His close friend, the 293-pound Democratic national committeeman from Indiana, Frank McHale, freely admitted that McNutt would be a candidate in 1940, although he warned that reporters "shouldn't trot Paul out so soon."

A number of Indiana political figures present, who preferred to withhold their names, agreed that the motive for the party was to put McNutt in the spotlight with a bang in order to regain any ground that might have been lost to the growing fame of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, now nominated as solicitor general.

The 33 suites-full of Indianans were still roaring away full-blast in general open house last night, long after the last charwoman had finished mopping up in the ballroom. Most of the delegation will return to Indiana today, but McNutt and his immediate entourage will remain in Washington for about three weeks. McNutt said last night:

"I expect to report to the White House tomorrow sometime on conditions in the Orient."

Austria Tense On Eve of Talk By Schuschnigg

Austria

Catholic mayor, Richard Schmidz, at a meeting of 4,000 members of the Fatherland Front.

"We have tolerated a lot," the mayor said, "but up to now we have preserved discipline. Our unchallengable motto remains 'Liberty and Austrian Independence.'"

Police precautions were redoubled as nervousness mounted on the eve of Schuschnigg's speech.

Increased security measures resulted from fear of even greater political demonstrations following the speech than have been staged since Schuschnigg and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler met at Berchtesgaden February 12.

Schuschnigg is expected to relate, as Hitler did in a speech at Berlin last Sunday, events leading up to the agreement which compelled the Austrian chancellor to admit Nazi influence into his cabinet after four years of opposition.

Torchlight Parade.

The Fatherland Front, sole legal political party in Austria, was planning a torchlight parade and a source close to the Nazis declared Nationalists and Nazis planned counter action, despite a four-week ban on political demonstrations.

It was explained the Nazis felt the ban on gatherings, other than those of the Fatherland Front, were aimed only against the Nazis, who were highly incensed.

At Linz, a city of 50,000 on the Danube 98 miles from Vienna, the Fatherland Front members and Nazis planned a common parade.

The Fatherland Front arranged for radio receiving sets at convenient gathering places throughout the country for Schuschnigg's broadcast. Many theaters will be closed. Flags already were appearing in profusion under burgomasters' orders.

A resolution supporting Schuschnigg in the crisis arising from the pact has been signed by 1,000,000 Austrian workers. One interpretation was that this was a move by Socialists, monarchists and Jewish sympathizers to pool their forces against the feared advance of Nazi power in Austria.

A Fatherland Front source said the chancellor might proclaim a plebiscite in his Thursday speech to ascertain his strength in the present turmoil.

Quiet prevailed in Vienna today, although normal conditions were by no means restored in the capital. Many gathering places were minus their usual crowds, business appeared slackened and passport offices were waiting on lines of applicants.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Her Very Life Threatened by Domineering Fiance Who Despoiled Her Innocence, Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18 and for a year and a half have been engaged to be married to a boy two years older. I am a high-school graduate and have special additional education. He has only an eighth-grade education. While we have been happy together during our engagement, we have quarreled more than the average couple. We love each other very much but we are both stubborn and he, especially, is inclined to be domineering, although he is sweet, good and decent; we share the same ideals, and he loves children.

• • • •

But here is the snag: he wants to boss me and refuses to let me participate in any social activities for fear I will become wild. He dislikes smoking, drinking and swearing, for which I admire him. Yet at parties he won't let me dance with or talk to anyone else, and nags at and fusses with me before strangers, which is very embarrassing. Also, we belong to different churches, and while he seldom goes to his church, he doesn't like my church and thinks I should give up mine and go to his. After services at my church he comes for me and orders me into his car in a loud voice that attracts attention.

• • • •

One night, after a miserable quarrel at a party, I decided to break the engagement and return some costly jewlry. Even though we love each other wholeheartedly, it seemed the best thing to do. But here is the catch: One night I lost control of myself and yielded to him, which eventuated in premarital intimacy. This angle of our relationship makes me wonder if I would be doing right in breaking off what to us was really marriage. This consideration, along with the fact that I do love him (I only yielded in order to make him happy) makes it very hard to break off.

• • • •

When we first quarreled and made up, tears came into his eyes. But after the third quarrel, when he came back for reconciliation and I refused, he threatened to kill me and has bought an instrument. Yet in spite of all this, it is all I can do to keep from making up with him after a quarrel. Each time I see him it is harder.

• • • •

What should I do? My parents say they will do anything to prevent our marriage and that I could never be happy with him. They don't know everything, though, and you are the only one I can tell everything to. I will run away if I can't find some solution. One other thing—when I do anything which displeases him, he tells me of another girl he was previously fond of; how she acted and what she did. It is like going with a man who has been previously married. Please advise me.

UNHAPPY.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR UNHAPPY: In your association with this boy, you have come under the spell of an influence that is both evil and disintegrating. For your own salvation's sake, you must break off the relationship. The boy's mind must be a cesspool of sordid imagining, or he would not impute such potential viciousness to you as to suppose he had to stand guard over all your actions less flagrant waywardness crop out. Fanatically zealous reformers and moral policemen are constantly wrestling with satanic temptation in their hearts, and erroneously suppose everyone else is engaged in the same morbid combat. It is a case of, "All seems infected that th' infected spy, as all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye."

• • • •

It would take a book to analyze, even in sketchy outline, the unwholesome implications of this boy's attitude toward you. Sufficient to say, however, that he is a person who, without being an out-and-out psychopathic case, is nevertheless mentally and spiritually sick. He is no fit associate, mentally or socially, for a normal girl. The fact that you currently lack the strength to break off with him, even when you know you should and ardently wish, with the intuitively wise, spiritually aspiring side of your nature, to do so, is evidence enough that you have come under the spell of a potentially degrading influence.

• • • •

It may sound like far-fetched mysticism to say so, but there are, very definitely, strong potentialities of good and evil in every nature, just as there are strong potentialities of sickness and health in every body. It is well known that one with organic susceptibility to certain physical illnesses may nevertheless preserve health by avoiding occasions of infection or contagion, and it is the same with one's mental and spiritual selves. Intimate association with a low-grade individual is just as dangerous, so far as possibilities of psychic infection are concerned, as association with a person under physician's quarantine would be. Not only could you never know happiness with this man, but you would find, in time, that your whole personality, perspective on life, and basic realization of what was right and wrong, elevating or degrading, to your own nature, was being distorted into a pitiful caricature of its former self.

• • • •

Persons who find themselves in dilemmas of this sort need enlightened spiritual guidance and support more than anything else. I would advise you to take this problem to your pastor, if you can confide in him fully. If not, take it to the pastor of another church of the same denomination and thus preserve your anonymity. You must be advised step by step, on how to integrate yourself so as to have the courage to take a firm stand in the situation; and also, you need practical, day-by-day suggestions on how to deal with the boy's threats, if he grows violent in the face of complete and final rejection.

• • • •

I know it would be very difficult for you, but, all things considered, it might be the wisest thing to make a confidante of your mother, as well. Since your family is opposed to the marriage, and rightly so, I am sure one or both of your parents would come to your aid in putting the boy to rout. Better insure yourself of a wholesome future, at the expense of present reproach or angry condemnation, than drift on into the whirlpool out of sheer cowardice, moral, physical and mental.

M. H.

Find Cheer In Poems

WE can't live without poetry. The heart needs noble words to feed on—such as Abou Ben Adhem speaks in the beloved and famous poem by Leigh Hunt.

To the angel Abou said:
"I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."
The angel wrote and vanished.
The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest."

Poetry gives us courage, too. Remember Kipling's "If"?

"If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies—"

And what matter if the day be dark and wintry—if you can read Wordsworth's lines:

"—Then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils."

"Where did you get those eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through."

Frances Parkinson-Keyes Called One-Woman Corporation Who Can Crowd Week in a Day

Harris & Ewing.

Her hours at her desk as an editor—usually from 9 to 6—represent only a part of Francis Parkinson Keyes' work day. Outside of office hours she writes books, lectures, studies, collects rare objects, runs her home efficiently and carries on an active special life. "You can always find time for the things you want to do," she says in explanation.

She Has Lectured in States All Over the Continent.

By Christine Sadler

THE AMAZING personality of Frances Parkinson Keyes has been a source of surprise to the Nation's Capital for more than two decades—and there seem to be no end to the elasticity of her schedule.

Novelist, biographer, reporter, editor, lecturer, homemaker, collector, student—Mrs. Keyes is a one-woman corporation who can make almost any 24-hour day do the work of an ordinary week.

When she became editor of the National Historical Magazine, publication of the Daughters of the American Revolution, last September, her friends wondered whether being moored to a desk might not clip the wings of her other endeavors. "Is F. P. K. settling down?" they gasped in astonishment.

But since that date "F. P. K." has made lectures in States that stretched from Texas to Michigan and from Illinois to Connecticut, has commuted between her Washington apartment and her New Hampshire home, and has completed her thirteenth book, "Parts Unknown," which will be published in the late spring.

And she did these man-sized jobs while making the magazine one of the most discussed publications in the country, with each issue a sell-out and the February number going into a second printing.

Where does she find the time and energy? Could some of the women who put up the "no time" plea cut themselves a slice of fame by following her methods? Perhaps at least part of the answer will be found below:

Always Finds Time.

To Mrs. Keyes the question of having no time for another job has never been any more important than that of how to have both a home and a career. She solves both problems by maintaining that there is always time and a way to do what you wish to do most—and then by going ahead and proving it. Wishing to write, she has written. Wishing to roam, she has traveled. Wishing to learn, she has studied. Yet she has found time to be an enthusiastic homemaker and a devoted mother.

She scoffs at the idea that any other woman could not do the same. "It is a matter of average ability, selection and incentive," she declares. "We have a way of finding time for what we wish to do most and what it is most clearly indicated that we should do."

If her friends were asked to tell how she manages her many enterprises, however, they would say that her ability springs from four specific talents. She has a photographic memory, an inexhaustible fund of energy and enthusiasm, a wide-awake interest in everything and everybody and a remarkable facility for dovetailing her efforts.

No experience is useless to her. No one has ever seen her bored; for she gets pleasure out of every event and makes it constructive. As a writer, everything is grist for her mill.

"Do you mind if I fictionize your side porch and garden?" I heard her ask a woman in Alexandria last week. Sooner or later, she uses everything that crosses her path. In "Parts Unknown" she utilizes background material gathered in many countries. What she left out this time will find its way into another of her books eventually.

Just before the Christmas holidays Mrs. Keyes was forced to bed by bronchitis. The current issue of the magazine was about to go to press, and the completed typescript of her novel was due at the publishers by January 1.

Wrote in Bed.

She wrote the last chapters of the book in bed, and finished her Christmas shopping by telephone. Proofs traveled back and forth between her apartment and the printing establishment. The book was finished on schedule and the magazine came out on time. With this behind her and her bronchitis mastered, she left town on January 2 to fill extensive lecture engagements in the Middle West.

Manuscripts—both her own on which she is writing and those which she is editing—follow her around by air express. Wherever she is, her work continues. En route to Europe last summer she wrote 3,000 words on a novel.

Her oldest son has said that at mid-ninety she still will be talking about her newest book and planning an expedition into Mongolia—or some just as distant country.

Although Mrs. Keyes admits she hates early rising, she keeps regular office hours. Her day at the magazine desk begins at 9 a. m., after a thorough reading of the newspapers, continues in her apartment until 1 6 p. m. or later. Her own writing continues in her apartment until or 2 o'clock the next morning. To crowd the hours as much as possible, she takes a box lunch to D. A. R. headquarters and allows herself something like 10 minutes to eat it.

Her present work as editor follows along familiar lines and fits well into the pattern she has set for herself. Her first writing was of historical sketches. Although she has written only one strictly historical novel—"The Safe Bridge"—all of her books have utilized actual characters, events and places.

She would like to do at least four other historical books—one on Virginia, one on the Deep South, one on Puerto Rico, and one on Hawaii. She plans also to write the life of Bernadette, the Saint of Lourdes, to be a companion piece to "Written in Heaven." "Honor Bright," her latest novel, has had the longest run as a best seller, but she considers "Writen in Heaven" her best piece of writing.

Also, she plans to do another book along the lines of "Capital Kaleidoscope." The new book would be world-wide in scope, instead of being laid in Washington.

Her ability as a collector of rare objects is well known, and she is never too busy to follow a promising trail. She is a connoisseur of fans, dolls, costumes, crucifixes and maps. It was from one of the historic maps hanging in her study that she took the title of "Parts Unknown"—which traces the life of a young American diplomatic couple in many different parts of the globe.

Mrs. Keyes analyzes herself as well as her characters, and is emphatic in her likes and dislikes. The latter are: early rising, big breakfasts, cold rooms, backbiters, snobs and liars. The likes are: clothes, bridge, movies, airplanes, motors and all kinds of boats from canoes to cruisers. She fears: elevators, snakes, dentists and committees of women. She is a good housekeeper, but does not have a growing hand with flowers. Her family will not permit her even to water a rubber plant, for fear it will wilt away.

She is gregarious but prefers small gatherings to big crowds and likes everybody who is doing anything worthwhile. Her voice is one of her best attributes and is an intimate part of her personality. She has the knack for making those in her company feel important. She is vivacious, but there are no barbed thrusts or witticisms in her conversation. In facts, she radiates sympathy and understanding. Perhaps this, after all, is the secret of her success; for it keeps her interested in a variety of things and fills her life with friendships which add a stimulus to work.

Miss Skinner Lauds Careers For Women

By Nancy Archibald.

"I BELIEVE that the Ednas of America are dying out," commented Cornelia Otis Skinner of the character she portrays this week at the National Theater. The modern woman devotes her time to study and keeping up-to-date, instead of indulging in that tragic round of time-killing activities that has occupied so many women liberated by the machine age to such an extent that they don't know what to do with the leisure thrust upon them."

A discussion of her part led into a discourse on women of all the ages, as Miss Skinner rested between performances at her apartment at the Hay-Adams House. "This epoch of speed does not properly impress me." Miss Skinner continued, "I mean human relations have not improved at the same rate that science has developed. Of course, the new sempo is beginning to stir people up.

Women Need Career.

"Today a woman must be more than a wife and mother; home life has a value that should not be looked down upon, but good cooking recipes and comfortable chairs in the house aren't enough. A woman should have a career or some outside interest so that she can contribute something extra that is thrilling to the family. Also she will not wear upon her relatives if their well-being is not her sole interest. A little independence breeds respect. Poor Edna hung so on the goings and comings of her children that they almost ran from her."

"No, I don't think the present era of complete independence for women is commendable," Mrs. Skinner continued. "I don't think women are completely happy entirely free. Just as a gathering of women is dull without the presence of men as a sort of stimulating audience, so the life of a woman with no man to share her successes and difficulties is empty.

European Women Happier.

"I believe European women are really happier. They do not search and search in restless need, forming clubs and organizations sublimating this longing for something better and more adequate in life. They are content to rule their homes and even their governments by the 'power behind the throne' method and they lead rich contented lives. Careers are taken easily by foreign feminists, rather than plunging, all-absorbed in their new-found opportunities to the exclusion of every other human relationship as American women are inclined to do."

"It is curious in studying the historical parts I have played, I find that women were on the whole more up and coming in Elizabethan and renaissance times than now in proportion to their opportunities. Look at the women of the Medici class during the Italian renaissance. They had all the privileges of the woman today and they exercised them with much more intelligence.

Borgias Admired.

"Look at the power of Borgia," Miss Skinner grew enthusiastic. "If I had my choice of a period of history to live in I certainly would have chosen those days. One drawback was that only a small class of wealthy intellectuals could rule in culture and politics, while today the way is open for any woman who has the dynamic energy to keep pace with the times and never let herself get stale. It takes a tremendous effort to fill the bill these days, to be a competent home-maker, to be quick-minded, well-informed, well but not overly-groomed, deeply understanding and above all, alert, alive and vibrant!"

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

What Price Simplicity.

I CAN scarcely wait each year until the world's ten best-dressed women are announced by the Paris dressmakers. For here are Exhibits A to G in good grooming, impeccable taste, sartorial imagination set up to be studied by all us little businesswomen. Surely even those of us who only look forward to selecting our $16.95 models—and in a pinch being persuaded to go as high as $29.50—can by dissecting these ladies of fashion get a little guidance in choosing our spring suits or in transforming last summer's evening dreses.

What then do we find?

First, the Duchess of Windsor, who heads the list as the unanimous choice of the dressmakers, has just one sartorial rule. It is—simplicity. Of course, we have been hearing for months—or is it years?—how the duchess always prefers "simple little dresses" made by Mainbocher. And now to celebrate her recent fashion triumph, she attended according to the United Press, a reception for Ambassador William C. Bullitt wearing "a simple little white crepe trimmed only with two bands of gold embroidery." Oh, yes, and a tiara of diamonds and emeralds, the "most recent gift of the duke and considered one of the finest pieces of modern jewelry seen in Paris in recent years." A thin strand of diamonds and emeralds at her throat "completed her costume."

Likes 'Simple Black.'

We also learn that "Wallis Blue" is not her favorite color but "simple black" for afternoon and "simple white" for evening. Also, that she likes tailored suits—of course "simply" tailored—for morning and is very particular about her shoes. Moreover, she is "always perfectly turned out, with not a wrinkle in her clothes or a hair out of place."

So much for Wally. Marina the Duchess of Kent is second on the list. She also prefers black. And her clothes were "always simply tailored even for evening." However, she does offset this simplicity with "brilliant accessories such as jeweled handbags."

Begum Aga Khan, former French milliner, who married the wealthy Indian prince and has risen from sixth to third place on the best-dressed list, depends largely on jewels to "set off" her presumably simple clothes. Her pearls and jewels are among the most famous in the world, the cables report, and "she loves furs."

Baronne Leo d'Erlander, fourth on the list, the former Edythe Baker of the United States, not only wears simply tailored clothes but parts her hair "simply in the middle." She also prefers "simple pieces of jewelry."

Diamonds a Help.

The Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellows, fifth in rank, is particularly famous for her sports clothes, which we may safely assume are also "simple."

Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, the sixth best-dressed woman, apparently depends to a large extent on her jewels and she is famous for her "beautiful collection" of diamond jewelry. In her dress, being a statuesque blonde, she prefers simple black and shades of green.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, who is seventh, is an old-timer on Best Dressed lists. Last year she was fourth and was No. 1 in 1933, 1934 and 1936. Mrs. Williams has long insisted that making the list is really not such a feat. She has pointed out in interviews that she always dresses very simply and even economically as she never spends more than $20,000 a year on her wardrobe.

Sequins for Evening.

Mrs. Millicent Rogers Balcom, who is eighth on this year's list, prefers Tyrolean sports outfits, which no doubt are made simply. Also, according to the cable story, she has "a schoolgirl complexion and more clothes than she knows what to do with."

Countess Barbara von Haugwitz-Reventlow, 10-cent store heiress, who got in as ninth on the list, is dismissed by the news reports as "preferring white for evening—and no diamonds."

Lady Louis Mountbatten is tenth on the list, but nevertheless she is considered the best-dressed English woman. She also likes "simple tailored clothes" for daytime with very short skirts. But in the evening she lets herself go and has just now ordered an all-sequin costume.

There, ladies, you have all the secrets of making the big ten, or failing that, all the hints necessary to guide you in doing your spring shopping. Boiled down to a few words it's all a matter of the right kind of simplicity.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 23.

MY JOURNALISTIC fate condemns me to constant and minute scrutiny of the public prints, thus keeping a calloused thumb on the pounding pulse of this absurd and unhappy world. Yet in all the current muddle, I find one ray of hope. The yearly ordeal of the ladies and gentlemen condemned to idleness in the Palm Beach sun nears its appointed end. Soon they can resume their suffering in Northern climes on this and other continents!

ALICE HUGHES.

At this moment, however, they are bearing their crosses with great fortitude and acres of mention in the press. Each morning, over the hot lemon juice, I am greeted with stunning photographs of our ladies holding up nobly on the Palm Beach sands, and after studying the bathing-suit picture of our Miss Lulilea Hurd in a print swim suit, I am forced to ask what the Hollywood cuties have that she hasn't—except, of course, movie contracts. Another tintype shows me that our Mrs. Tommy Hitchcock, wife of the polo star, is doing her seasonal suffering at Hamilton, Bermuda, with a bike and a pair of handsome slacks.

But I do not mean that all these plush people are idle. By no means. No less than three Russian princes are in trade at Palm Beach, vending gowns or pre-revolution knick-knacks from Holy Russia. Mr. Jay O'Brien is in the radio business, and many gentlemen, such as Mr. Gurnee Munn, are involved in real estate.

Socially, of course, things are white hot, with colonists agog over such thrilling sports events as the wheel-chair race, with the young man pushing and the belle riding and cheering. This is a significant affair, it seems to me. The prizes are silver cups and champagne, all of which will help these handsome youngsters in the coming struggle with life in the raw.

This month will see the end of the big, big season—in March they will all be looking for another pillory. If you seem to sense a dollop of sour grapes here, you are right. How I'd like to help them undergo agony!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We struggle through miserable month as best we can. Mid-February was hotted up by two titanic events—the big dog show at Madison Square Garden and Elsa Maxwell's skating orgy on Mr. Jack Rockefeller's ice. The first drew over 3,000 entries, the latter something over 100. Both were fabulous events, though it is slightly more thrilling to see a social leader coming down with a thump than beholding a noble poodle having his tail inspected. All Elsa's "most intimate friends" came to take their medicine, including my name champion of the winter, Baron Kurt Pantz, of Austria. No less swank was the pup pageant. No hound-fancier, I was much impressed with those walking rugs, the Afghans, who have more hair than Stokowski, and by the fact that the rodent canines, the Mexican hairless, were wearing ducky little Tyrolean jackets, hand-crocheted!

• • • •

Our sung valentines by Postal-Telegraph were also a mid-winter wonder for little shut-ins like myself. It was quite a knocker-over to pick up the phone and have a young lady sing "My dear valentime, I send you this line!" to the tune of "Two Beers, Mr. Shane." So huge was the demand for this dido that over 20 strictly amateur larks were kept busy croaking of love over the wire on Valentine Day.

• • • •

Ina Claire has busted with her stage precedent. I find that in her new show, "Once Is Enough," the Irish minx from Washington is playing a really good woman—for the first time these 20 years. Fizzing Ina has been doing girls with patchy pasts or doubtful presents all this time, but now she says she is reveling in her rectitude. "A great surprise to me," she tells me. "I thought ladies on the stage were extinct!"

• • • •

The style openings here and in Paris, were stolen by the modest little posy called mimosa.

• • • •

Practically every portion of the world having been plumbed for style influences, it has taken the wife of an explorer to come up with a new one. She's Helen von Bauman, who contributes clothes and accessories designed from the raiments of the Indians of the Andes in Ecuador. Well, that about cleans up the fashion sources of earth. There's hardly a square inch that hasn't been ravaged and exploited by clothes designers!

Flush Borders.

Newly popular for spring are flush border styles in lace net curtains. These are the borders that are woven right to the edge of the curtain, resulting in a lace-like edging. They are a decorative finish for the simple back-ground-net weave of the curtains.

1 egg
1 teaspoon of vanilla

Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler until melted. Combine sugar, flour and salt and add to the chocolate mixture. Cook until thickened. Stir constantly. Continue cooking 10 minutes longer. Add egg yolks, stirring constantly, and cook 2 minutes. Add vanilla and stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a crust made by blending vanilla wafers with softened butter and patting against the sides and bottom of the pie plate. Bake in a hot oven for 10 minutes, remove, cool.

Before icing a cake always brush off any loose crumbs on the top and sides and cut off rough edges with scissors. If the crumbs get into the frosting they make it look lumpy.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Food Can Help You Lose Weight as Well as Gain It!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN YOU do not lose weight as rapidly as you should on a low calorie diet it may be that you are getting insufficient food of the right kind. Food can help you to lose!

Protein is a most important food in the reducer's diet. In addition to being a repair food in the replacement of worn-out body tissues, protein stimulates the burning of fat in the body and actually helps you to turn more food into energy.

Recently I received a letter from a physical education instructor asking me to analyze her diet because she is not losing weight. This gave me the idea that perhaps many of you are having the same difficulty on a low calorie menu. Her diet is as follows: Fruit juice, toast and black coffee for breakfast. Fruit for lunch. A small serving of lean meat, two vegetables, a salad and fruit for dinner. In spite of considerable exercise in connection with her work, this young woman cannot reduce.

Menu Criticized.

There are two things wrong with the menu. The protein and minerals are much too low to provide the balanced diet which assures well being. Moreover, the food intake should be distributed over the day to furnish energy as it is needed. As it is, she takes most of the day's food at dinner, at the end of the day's work.

A much more effective and satisfying reducing plan is to include protein at breakfast in the form of an egg or milk on cereal. Instead of a fruit luncheon a serving of meat or cheese, a cooked vegetable and a glass of skim milk or buttermilk make a better meal for the reducer. The meal would not exceed 250 calories, whereas an apple and a banana furnish about 200 calories. There is no comparison between the food values of the two meals.

Lean Meat Helps.

The reducer who includes daily a liberal amount of lean meat (about one-half pound), one or two eggs and a serving of cottage cheese or one pint of skim milk or buttermilk, will be more satisfied to stay on a reducing menu which does not depict her vitality and she will lose weight faster.

Food, to be sufficient, must be of the right kind.

Protein Most Important Item in Diet of the Reducer.

For a perfectly balanced menu you must add to this list two cooked vegetables, two fresh fruits, one and a half pats of butter and three thin slices of whole wheat bread.

Huge McNutt Reception Attracts, Amuses Scores

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Senator and Mrs. Sherman Minton's reception for Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner of the Philippines and Indiana's Presidential possibility, may not have been the most brilliant social event of the season, but it was certainly one of the most interesting.

From the feminine point of view alone, there were enough sidelights to keep society reporters on the job twice as long as at the average reception. The mammoth tea table loaded with as lavish a spread as Washington has seen this season . . . the new spring hats and trim suits and frocks . . . the scraps of comment gathered here and there in the Chinese room, where guests were received—all these ingredients were stirred into an event nobody should have missed—if anyone did.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"He looks like a President, anyway," said one woman as she admiringly watched the guest of honor.

"I'd vote for him any time," put in another. "That tropical suntan and shock of white hair would look well in the White House. He's the handsomest man I ever saw."

Meanwhile, as lights flashed and cameras clicked, the spacious rooms at the Mayflower very much resembled a Hollywood movie set, with Mr. McNutt rehearing a leading role. Senator and Mrs. Minton, who stood by his side also came in for their share of attention. She was smartly turned out in a pencil blue chiffon frock with a full, floor-length skirt and short sleeves, appliqued in vari-colored flowers. Three gardenias on her left shoulder and a string of pearls completed her costume.

Noted Indianans Glimpsed in Crowd

By gardenias on their shoulders you could identify 15 women who served as assistants at the reception. They either took turns at the coffee urns and teapots (there were two of each at the table) or mingled in the crowd, greeting guests and showing Indiana notables around. It looked as if everyone with the slightest Indiana connection was on hand, plus several hundred who came because they knew the Mintons, and scores of others who came for curiosity.

One feminine figure who was a special center of attention among Indiana guests was Mrs. Marie Jaharakos, director of foreign votes for the Democratic State committee, and, in the words of one who knows her, "the outstanding Greek woman in United States politics." Looking much more the fashion plate than the vote-getter yesterday, she wore a metal cloth frock that blended nicely with a small brown felt turban. Following the reception she and the Mintons and Mr. McNutt were invited to "stop by the Greek Legation for a brief visit with Minister Sicilianos," she said. As for the McNutt-for-President boom, she had only this comment: "If he runs—I'm for him."

Mrs. William McBride, of Indiana, was another prominent Indiana woman who proved especially popular. Her fur-trimmed beige frock, worn with a green, broad-brimmed straw hat, green gloves and purse to match had reporters making notes all over the place. The Governor of Indiana was reported to be here, there and everywhere, but I never saw him. Mrs. Townsend headed the 15 women who assisted, Mrs. Omer S. Jackson, wife of the chairman of the Democratic State committee and the Attorney General of Indiana, also was on hand, as were Mrs. Frank McHale, wife of the Democratic National Committeeman of Indiana, and her sister-in-law, Dr. Kathryn McHale, of Washington.

Four Senate Wives Among Assistants

Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Mrs. Edward Burke—all wives of Senators—also assisted. Representative Virginia Jenckes, in black velvet with a wide-brimmed hat to match, was there to shake hands with the host and hostess and greet folks from home. Among wives of Representatives whose time were divided between their Indiana friends and the business of presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Samuel B. Pettingill, Mrs. James I. Farley, who arrived with her pretty daughter, Miss Maxine Farley; Mrs. Glenn Griswold, Mrs. Arthur H. Greenwood, Mrs. John William Boehne, Mrs. William Henry Larrabee and Mrs. Louis Ludlow.

Glimpsed among the guests were Mrs. William Borah, in a black and white ensemble, who arrived shortly after Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper. Mrs. Harry H. Woodring wife of the Secretary of War, was the only other Cabinet wife I saw in the crowd.

Mrs. Benton McMillin was there, accompanied by her niece and nephew, who recently arrived from Rio de Janeiro. Mrs. Ralph Church was accompanied by her house guest, Mrs. Francis P. Horan, of Evanston, Ill. Mrs. Royal S. Copeland was among the guests; also Mrs. Laurence Houghteling, in a handsome black ensemble; Senator and Mrs. Harry Schwartz; Mrs. Millard Tydings, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Knight Davies; Mrs. Mary Dewson, one of the few consistent New Dealers who appeared at the party; Mrs. James J. Davis, Dr. Ernest Gruening, Representative Sam Rayburn, House majority leader; Senator Henry F. Ashurst, whose Chesterfieldian bows went nicely with his striped trousers and cutaway; Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, one of the few Army officers in the crowd, and Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin.

Also, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, who lingered long to talk with Mr. McNutt; Senator Theodore Green, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Representative and Mrs. Paul Greever, Representative and Mrs. Pete Jarman, Representative Finly Gray, Mrs. Louis Schapiro, Representative Ewing Thomason, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. M. Johnson, and Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Hines.

Many Diplomats Leave America

With Joseph P. Kennedy, new United States Ambassador to London leading the way, many of America's diplomatic society sailed yesterday on the Manhattan. Others on the roster included the United States Ambassador, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr. and Mrs. Biddle, who have just concluded a big round of partying on our shores; Mrs. Hugh R. Wilson, wife of the United States Ambassador to Germany, and Douglas Jenkins, United States Consul-General in London.

Prominent foreign visitors recently in Washington, chose the Queen Mary for their ship yesterday, among them Lord and Lady Stanley, and Bishop Paul Yu Pin of Nanking.

Lord and Lady Mountbatten, who have just returned to the St. Regis in New York City from a holiday in the South will probably be shaking the dust of America from their feet soon.

While members of Washington society are feting Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, head of the Frontier Nursing Service, Miss Marion Shouse, a courier of the organization, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Sulgrave Club for Mrs. Breckinridge . . . New York City is also doing a good bit of tooting for the Kentucky riders, who spend their time in welfare work among the mountaineers. Last evening one of the most heavily subscribed benefits of the metropolitan season took place at the Henry Miller Theater where "Once Is Enough" played under the auspices of the New York committee of the society.

Among those on the New York committee are Mrs. Marvin Breckinridge, Mrs. Charle Dana Gibson, Mrs. Warren Thorpe . . . and, of course, Mrs. Roosevelt.

Wedding of Interest Here

MRS. DUNCAN FRASER,
who before her marriage yesterday in Baltimore was Miss Dorothy Sollers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peterson Sollers, of that city. She is a cousin of the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington, with whom she lived for several years. A member of the Washington Junior League and well known here, her wedding was attended by many from this city.

Miss Dorothy Sollers Married To the Rev. Fraser in Baltimore

Wedding of Interest to Washingtonians Takes Place at Memorial Church; Bride Made Home in Capital for Number of Years.

An out-of-town wedding attended by many Washingtonians was that of Miss Dorothy Sollers to the Rev. Duncan Fraser yesterday at noon in the Memorial Church of Baltimore. The Rev. Benjamin B. Lovett officiated.

The bride, who made her home in Washington for several years, and is a cousin of the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peterson Sollers, of Baltimore. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Donald Fraser, of Johnstown, N. Y., and the late Mr. Fraser.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown fashioned in empire style and trimmed with a standing collar and elaborate front panel of old duchess lace. Her veil was of tulle and Flemish lace and she carried a prayer book.

Her sister, Mrs. James Benson Robertson, jr., was her maid of honor. She wore light green marquisette and a poke bonnet, trimmed in darker green, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Her other attendants—all of whom were children—included Clare and Mary Lee Fahnestock, Patricia Sollers, Joseph S. Sollers, jr., David Tuck and Alvin Winship. The little girls were in frocks of white shadow organdy over peach, wore organdy poke bonnets and had old-fashioned bouquets. The little boys were in dark blue suits. Malcolm Weeks Fraser, of Toledo, Ohio, the brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Following the wedding there was a reception for members of the immediate families. Mrs. J. P. Sollers, who assisted in receiving, was gowned in a dress of black crepe and marquisette.

The couple, on their return from their wedding trip, will make their home in Washington at 1500 Forty-fourth street.

The former Miss Sollers is a graduate of Bryn Mawr and is a member of the Junior League of Washington. Mr. Fraser is an alumnus of Brown University, Oxford University and General Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Kept Busy On First Day Home

Press Conference, Two Teas and Dinner on Her Schedule.

On her first day at the White House after a visit to Cornell University and a brief stay in Hyde Park, Mrs. Roosevelt found her schedule yesterday as crowded as usual. A dinner last evening, two teas in the afternoon and her press conference in the morning were the outstanding functions on her calendar.

While the President was on his way back to the White House, the First Lady entertained 19 guests at dinner. Later, two of the guests—Rene LeRoy, flautist, and Albert Leveque, pianist—gave a short program. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., headed the list of guests. Others there were Representative and Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Dr. Leos S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, Norman S. Case, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Rockwell Kent, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Miss Harriet Winslow, Mrs. James M. Helm, and Col. and Mrs. Edwin Watson.

Receives Members of Society of Sponsors

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt received the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy, of which she is a member. The sponsors are women who have christened vessels of the United States Navy. Following her reception for that society, she entertained at a tea. This evening, she and the President will be host and hostess at the reception to the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps. This function is the last on the official White House calendar for this season.

At her weekly press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt—who, incidentally, was minus lipstick and rouge—outlined her program for the remainder of the week and talked briefly about her forthcoming lecture tour.

Today she will attend the luncheon of the League of Women Voters at the Mayflower Hotel, and this afternoon, she will make a brief talk at the meeting of the Textile Museum at 4 o'clock.

The committee of national sponsors for the Amelia Earhart Foundation will have luncheon at the White House tomorrow, Mrs. Roosevelt said, and will hold a meeting afterward. She is honorary chairman of the committee. Tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Mrs. Roosevelt will participate in a broadcast of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women and tomorrow night she will speak at a meeting of the Washington branch of the Youth Congress. Her next press conference will be held either Monday or Thursday of next week.

Discusses Rules For Lecture Tour

Mrs. Roosevelt has formulated two new rules, to be followed in connection with her lecture tour, which begins March 7, in Wichita Falls, Tex.

She will not attend any public dinners, luncheons or receptions before making a speech because of the risk of straining her voice.

She will use only half her time "for going out to see things," devoting the other half to answering mail and reading.

She intends, also, to follow the rule, established some time ago, of not giving autographs in public. She prefers her lecture schedule not to be published, but she said it would take her through the Southwest, up the California coast, and end March 21 at Seattle, Wash. Her subjects, she observed, were much the same as those used on other lecture tours. The four she mentioned as being the ones most frequently selected were "Peace," "The Individual's Responsibility to the Community," "Problems of Youth," and "A Day in the White House."

She will give 14 lectures in all, and then will join the President in Warm Springs, Ga., for a brief vacation before returning to the White House. While in Georgia, however, she will make a special trip to Atlanta to talk at a meeting of rural women March 29.

In the course of her conference yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt corrected a statement she made at a previous conference regarding the opening of the Eleanor Roosevelt housing project in San Juan, Puerto Rico. She had said that she had not been invited to be present at the opening, but could not find time to go even if she had. She pointed out that she had received an invitation some time ago, but had forgotten about it at the time she was asked whether she planned a trip to Puerto Rico.

Albanian Minister Is Ranking Guest At Watson Dinner

The Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, was the ranking guest at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watson at their home on Varnum street.

Mr. Zoulfikar, Former Attache Here, Expires

To friends in Washington, announcement of the sudden death of Ibrahim Said Zoulfikar, formerly attache of the Egyptian Legation, was a distinct shock. Stricken by bronchial pneumonia, he passed away in Cairo February 12.

Leaving Washington with Mme. Zoulfikar to attend the recent Egyptian coronation, he was transferred at that time to a post in his native country. He is survived by his wife and a young son.

About the Town
With Dudley Harmon

FOR THE FIRST TIME in her distinguished career as a patron of music, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend received yesterday a decoration from a foreign government—and the Handel Medal awarded her was given for the first time to an American.

In a ceremony at the German Embassy the Ambassador, Hans Dieckhoff, presented the plaque to Mrs. Townsend before a gathering of music lovers, diplomats, socially prominent residents and members of the press.

The presentation took place before the fireplace in the dining room, with its handsome brocaded curtains and crystal chandeliers. In a brief speech, the Ambassador began by saying that, although Handel had lived a large part of his life in England, he was born at Halle, Germany, on February 23, 1685. Four years ago, he continued, the citizens of Halle had struck a medal commemorating his birth, to be awarded to "those men or women who especially distinguish themselves in fostering music."

DUDLEY HARMON.

• • • •

MRS. TOWNSEND replied briefly, expressing her appreciation and saying that from now on she was going to include a work of Handel at all her morning musicales.

• • • •

Fritz Kreisler, Richard Crooks, Rosa Ponselle and others who have since become famous owe their start to Mrs. Townsend. She gave Fritz Kreisler his Vienna debut when he was 18 years old and her husband was Counselor of the United States Legation in Austria. Ponselle and Crooks made their Capital debuts at one of her musicales. Her Monday morning concerts here have become a Washington tradition, attended regularly by the current First Lady and the cream of political and residential society.

Mrs. Townsend intends to have her medal mounted and will place it on a table in her drawing room where a valuable Russian icon and other objets d'art already repose.

• • • •

DR. HANS KINDLER, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Truxton Beale and Mrs. Matthew Whittall, who presented a valuable collection of Stradivarius instruments to the Library of Congress, were among the music lovers present yesterday. Mrs. Dows and Dr. Kindler had previously attended a tea marking the opening of the National Symphony's drive for funds which it must have in order to continue.

Others present yesterday were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol; the Czechoslovakian Minister and Mme. Hurban, the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Harold Sims, Miss Rebecca Wellington, Miss Dorothy Tirrell and several members of the embassy staff. Frau Thomsen, wife of the Counselor, poured tea.

• • • •

HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT seems to be moving members of the British Embassy staff here around like checkers on a checkerboard. At least half a dozen people have been transferred in the last six months, and now comes word that the Financial Counselor and attractive Mrs. Noel Trentham are about to go. It doesn't seem quite fair, for Mr. Trentham has been here less than a year, and Mrs. Trentham came to Washington as a bride only two or three months ago.

Mr. Trentham will go to London to head one of the divisions of the treasury department. He expects to leave the middle of March. His wife will go a week from tomorrow to Newfoundland for a farewell visit with her family there.

Before coming to Washington, the retiring financial counselor served for a time as secretary of the treasury in New Foundland.

Luncheon Given For Arkansans

Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, and Mrs. John A. Miller, wife of the newly elected Senator from Arkansas, were guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. P. Frank Milwee, whose husband is State director for the HOLC, in Arkansas. The event took place at the Capitol Park Hotel.

Other members of the Arkansas delegation who were present were Mrs. Dave Terry, Mrs. William Oldfield, Mrs. Charles F. Martin, Mrs. Thomas Hart, Mrs. Walter Taylor, Mrs. R. I. Zimmerman, Mrs. Thomas S. Gemple and Mrs. Samuel Wassell.

Envoy of Cuba Back In Capital

Back in Washington after an absence of several months is that popular bachelor, the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga.

For all too long a time . . . in the opinion of Washington society . . . he has been delayed in Havana on official business. Although as yet no parties are lining up at the white-stoned, red-carpeted Cuban Embassy on Sixteenth street, everyone is hoping that there will soon be an announcement of something-or-other in the mail.

It was Dr. Fraga who lifted Washington out of its summer drought last autumn when single-handed he started the social season on its way, with a record-breaking series of fetes and receptions and shindigs.

Women Democrats Hear Senator Alben Barkley

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Senator Alban Barkley, majority leader, last night addressed the Woman's National Democratic Club at the dinner which climaxed its annual "election day." Polls were opened in the afternoon when the business meeting convened at 3 o'clock in the clubhouse and the slate of officers, headed by Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, president for the last year, was re-elected.

Senator Barkley, speaking on "The Present Challenge to Democracy," asserted that "never in history has democracy been called upon to meet so universal and sinister a challenge as faces it today." Until now it has been taken as a matter of course, he said, looked upon as a natural inheritance, a thing established beyond the power of destruction.

During the period following the World War, when crowns were falling in Europe, the long-established democracies regarded the changes as justification of the democratic form of government and indication the rest of the world desired it.

"Now we find those countries have exchanged crowned monarchs for crowned dictators," he said.

He pointed out that the challenge to democracy is not confined to influences within our country, but extends throughout the world and urged all who cherished democratic ideals to "fight day and night for their preservation."

Through the entire history of the United States, said Senator Barkley, the theme of democratic government has been expressed by its leaders: the "equal rights for all and special privileges for none" of Thomas Jefferson; "government of the people, by the people and for the people" of Lincoln; the "Square Deal" of Theodore Roosevelt; "New Freedom" of Woodrow Wilson and the "New Deal" of the present Administration. All were based, he said, on the ideal of democracy, "a government before which the humblest man or woman could stand assured of equality, dignity and protection."

In the beginning of his talk Senator Barkley referred to the recent filibuster, but expressed the hope that now that the Senate had begun to function again, it would reach adjournment by May and so its members could return home "where some of us are sorely needed in order that the people of America shall not be deprived permanently of our services."

Mrs. Hubbard presided at the dinner, and other officers were present, seated with parties of friends, whom several were entertaining, rather than at the head table. Mrs. William F. Weigester, who was elected corresponding secretary, succeeding Mrs. William E. Fort, is the only new officer. Those re-elected include Mrs. Garland Ferguson, jr., first vice president; Mrs. J. Brent Clark, second vice president; Mrs. Frank S. Bright, treasurer, and Mrs. Albert A. Jones, recording secretary.

Directors re-elected yesterday were Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs. Those who hold over are Mrs. David Tucker Brown, Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester, Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. Loren Johnson, Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. William Beverly Mason, Mrs. Ellis Meredith, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross and Mrs. Charles Warren.

Committee chairmen are Mrs. Joseph D. Grimsley, chairman of education; Mrs. Huston Thompson, of finance; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, membership; Mrs. Keating, programs; Mrs. Meredith, of the Digest, and Mrs. Howell Moorhead.

Preceding the annual meeting in the afternoon, the club members made their yearly pilgrimage to Woodrow Wilson's tomb, where a wreath was laid by Mrs. Warren.

Those at the head table included Mrs. Hubbard, Senator and Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint; Mrs. William Jennings Price, Miss Charl O. Williams and Mrs. Caroline Woodruff, of the National Education Association; Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant Treasurer of the United States; Mrs. Loren Johnson, Mrs. John B. Gordon and Miss Ellen G. Hood, of Philadelphia.

Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Weigester, Mr. and Mrs. Keating, Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Jones, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, W. H. Ayers, Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, Admiral and Mrs. Edward R. Stitt, Mrs. Mary McCracken Jones, Miss Hazel Edgar, Mrs. George Frysinger, Miss Grace Frysinger, Mrs. Eugene Tighe, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Representative Luther Patrick, Mrs. William McKenna, Mrs. Paul Myron Lineberger, Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter, Capt. and Mrs. Henry T. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip W. Chappell, Mrs Emily Newell Blair, who is honorary vice president of the club; Mildred Turner Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor.

Chapter B of the P. E. O. was entertained yesterday at the home of Mrs. Edgar B. Merrit, who, in addition to being active in the P. E. O., is president of the Political Study Club, past president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs and for the past three years chairman of radio for the General Federation.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. James W. Crabtree, who won the 1937 Isabel Anderson art prize for her oils, and Mrs. S. A. Swiggett, who, as General Federation art chairman, inaugurated the first greater Washington Art Show.

Mrs. E. H. Pitcher, president of Chapter B, presided and Mrs. Elliott Brumbaugh was in charge of the program.

Artists were Mrs. Maxwell Galloway, soprano, who sang "Brown Bird Singing" (Haydn) and Vissi d' Arte, Vissi d' Amour, from "La Tosca," accompanied by Miss Dorothy Loftust, and Mrs. Mabel Getman Ostradder, who presented two request piano numbers. They were "Rustle of Spring" (Sinding) and "Theme for Left Hand Alone" (Pirkhert).

Plan Launched To Put Flower Boxes In Alleys

Children living in Washington's alleys next summer will watch seeds sprout and bloom in little flower gardens or boxes of their own. A plan was inaugurated yesterday at a meeting held in the headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, by which garden clubs of the city will co-operate with the 18 denominations represented in the Woman's Council of the federation in providing seedlings and weekly instruction for the children in such a project.

The plan will not only serve the purpose of giving the children knowledge of the care of flowers and a pride in ownership of them but will provide beauty for the city's dreariest localities. The project, which was originated at the suggestion of Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the council, is expected to have the added value of teaching the young gardeners who, heretofore, have had no opportunity to enjoy flowers or watch them grow, an appreciation of beauty and a desire to preserve it whether it is theirs or belongs to another.

The plan will be far-reaching in enlisting community interest. The first boxes for Washington alley dwellers are now being made by the Mount Tabor Methodist troop of Boy Scouts in Georgetown, under the leadership of D. W. Martin, scoutmaster. The troop "adopted" one of the alleys at Christmas time and has been busy since preparing window boxes to be given the residents this spring.

Garden club presidents who attended the meeting yesterday called attention to the need of proper soil for such a project and the Boy Scouts at once volunteered to provide it. They have discovered on some of their hiking trips locations from which excellent earth may be obtained and each Scout can bring back five pounds on a trip.

A series of lessons in planting and transplanting will precede the actual presentation of the boxes filled with new earth. The boxes may be distributed on one day designated as Alley Garden Day, when the seedlings and plants will be provided and put in the boxes by the children under supervision of garden club members.

It was also suggested yesterday that a flower show of alley window gardens might be held at the end of the season and prizes awarded for those which showed the best care.

Many of the alleys where the boxes will be placed even lack grass, Miss Russell explained to the women interested in the project.

Another project which will go hand and hand with that of providing the flower boxes will be the providing of cut flowers each day for the wards of the hospitals in the city. Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, hospital worker for the federation, is responsible for this part of the plan.

Each garden club will send a certain quota of flowers, as well as those from its flower shows during the season. Women of the council will contribute pretty bedside vases for the bouquets.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, spoke of the value of the project. Mrs. Barton Embrey, an officer of the council, poured tea at a table in the library of the headquarters, decorated in lavender and yellow flowers.

Garden Club representatives who attended were Mrs. H. J. Clay, of Woodridge; Mrs. John L. Bishop, whose husband is president of the National Capital Dahlia Society; Mrs. George E. Pariseau, Bethesda Community Garden Club; Mrs. Edwin Talcott, Georgetown; Mrs. J. E. Fitzgerald, Chevy Chase; Mrs. Arthur J. Hilland, Bethesda Community Garden Club.

From the various denominations in the Women's Council were Mrs. T. W. Marshall, Baptist; Mrs. J. P. G. Barger and Mrs. E. J. Hobbs, Christian; Mrs. D. N. Shoemaker, Friends; Mrs. John L. Rogers, Methodist; Mrs. Embrey and Mrs. W. H. Everhardy, Methodist Episcopal South; Mrs. Mason B. Lemming and Mrs. Mary Wingate, Presbyterian, U. S. A.; Mrs. E. M. Kennickell and Mrs. Jacob Ergenbright, Presbyterian, U. S.

Helen Keller Joins Sponsors

Helen Keller, who, though blind, can see, and, though deaf, can hear, is to be one of the sponsors for the Woman's Party "Amelia Earhart Fund for Equal Rights." Wiring Mrs. Sarah Thompson Pell, Miss Keller said yesterday: "Am glad to sponsor equal rights amendment. Cordial wishes for success."

Equal Rights magazine, official organ of the Woman's Party, announcing the fund, said it was "named in honor of that dauntless exponent of the principle of equality, Amelia Earhart, who cast her lot with the National Woman's Party in the effort to bring about equal rights under law through the proposed equal rights amendment."

George Palmer Putnam, writing to Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of the fund committee, said he was "glad to consent to your plan to use Amelia's name in connection with your Equal Rights Fund," and that he appreciated deeply "your personal, friendly interest and that of the National Woman's Party, about which, as you know, Amelia was always so enthusiastic."

A year ago Amelia Earhart sent the following message to the National Woman's Party Convention in New York: "Today women still stand victims of restrictive legislative and of conflicting interpretations of statutes. To clear the situation their rights must be made theirs by definition. That is—by constitutional guarantee. Therefore, I hope this year's National Party meeting may bring us at least one step nearer the Lucretia Mott amendment."

Among those distinguished women of achievement who are sponsors of the Amelia Earhart fund for equal rights are Rachel Crothers, playwright; Georgia O'Keeffe, artist; Lucy Madiera Wing, of the Madiera School, and Queene Ferry Coonley, educators, and Inez Haynes Irwin, writer. The chairman of the committee is Olivia Taylor, whose great, great, great grandfather was Thomas Jefferson.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THIS AFTERNOON the Washington Committee of the Frontier Nursing Service will hear its founder, Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, tell of its work in the Kentucky mountains during the past year. Her visit to Washington for the annual meeting is an occasion to which Washingtonians look forward almost as much as her mountain friends do to her return.

To them she is "Mary." Little children and the mammies and pappies all call her simply that—a name which has become synonymous with kindness, helpfulness and relief from distress in the section covered by the Frontier Nursing Service.

With all the efficiency of the service and the business-like way in which records have been kept in its mountain cabin office since the time it was started, it is in no sense an ordinary welfare or medical center. There is a spirit animating it which is typified by that of its founder.

* * * *

RUNNING one hand through her close-cut, iron-gray hair and smiling at me with kind gray eyes, she said she could not understand why people did not like those of other races and nations.

"In the final analysis, all nations are made up just like all others of men, women and children. They all have the same primary needs for food and shelter and the same desire for peace and happiness. They are all the same and yet each person is different from all the others—and I have never found one I didn't like," she said.

Mrs. Breckenridge has lived in many different countries and has loved the people wherever she has been because she has lived among them and understood them.

As I talked to her, I found the unselfish devotion and spiritual strength which characterize those who give their lives to help others.

"The world would be a better place if people realized that life is really eternal," she said. "It doesn't stop, you know, it goes right on."

* * * *

SHE SHOWED ME some of the quarterly bulletins which spread news of the Frontier Nursing Service to its committee members. Mrs. Breckenridge, in addition to her other duties, is editor of the bulletin whose pages tell simple stories of every-day experiences in the frontier service—stories more gripping than those found in fiction. She says, incidentally, that God made her to be a nurse but that she had to make herself an editor.

One of the stories, briefly told by Della Int-Hout, nurse at Possum Bend Center, is entitled "Quicksand." On her little horse, Carmenetta, she took a ford through a swollen river on her way back from the home of a patient.

"When Carmenetta went to land on the opposite bank," she says, "we sank in the quicksand." I had to think quickly—my stirrups were lying on the sand—Carmenetta was up to her belly—and my weight was sinking her further. I rolled off and continued to roll in order to distribute my weight, as I knew I couldn't stand. After a few minutes I found myself on firm ground and stood trembling, watching Carmenetta attempting to save herself. She was panting and 'hit was a sight to the world,' neighbors said afterward. They thought she would never make it, but she was smart. She kept plunging and causing the water to rush in and distribute the quicksands—and backing herself gradually so she was able to get back into swimming water.

I could hear her panting (the saddlebags were full of water), as she hit the middle of the river and began swimming down toward me. I kept running along the edge of the river—she watching me all the time—until I thought I had found a firm bank—firm enough to hold a horse. I stamped on it and called to her. She hesitated but I continued the stamping until she was reassured that all was well and then the dear, brave little soul came swimming toward me and landed to safety."

* * * *

Quicksand is one of the hazards to be encountered in the spring as the nurses and doctors make their calls, Mrs. Breckenridge remarked as she pointed out the account.

As I heard her talk of her mountain people, I recalled Kipling's lines.

"I have eaten your bread and your salt;
"I have drunk your water and wine;
"The deaths that ye died, I watched beside,
"And the lives that ye lived were mine."

Sorority Plans Founding Party

Washington members of Phi Mu Sorority will celebrate the eighty-sixth anniversary of its founding March 4 with its annual founders' day banquet, which will be attended by members of the alumnae association of the sorority and by Beta Alpha Chapter of George Washington University and Gamma Delta Chapter of American University. The banquet will be held at the Kennedy-Warren. Mrs. H. S. Bishop is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. J. Foster Hagan, Mrs. Gustave Burmeister and Mrs. William Bradford.

Phi Mu shares honors with Alpha Delta Pi Sorority as one of the two oldest sororities in the country. Phi Mu was founded at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., in 1852, by Mary Myrick Daniels, Martha Hardaway Redding and Mary Dupont Lines. It was first known as the Philomathean Society, and later became Alpha Chapter of Phi Mu. There are now 55 active chapters on college campuses throughout the United States, and 53 alumnae associations.

The sorority supports a health-mobile, which supplies medical care to the mountain people of Georgia, in memory of its three founders. Phi Mus who do not belong to the local associations, but who wish to attend the banquet, may make reservations with Mrs. Bishop.

Spanish Benefit Show.

Mrs. Joseph Kaufman is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Howe Strikes Keynote As Symphony Launches Drive

Vice Chairman of Appeal Talks at Tea for Members of Women's Committee, Who Receive Their Final Instructions.

"We're going to keep the National Symphony Orchestra or know the reason why."

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, vice chairman of the campaign for funds, struck its keynote with this statement yesterday at the tea for members of the women's committee, given at the Carlton by L. Corrin Strong, campaign chairman.

Washington's musicians, as well as music lovers, seemed to be out in force, lending their support to the undertaking. There were singers, pianists, artists of various other instruments, choir leaders and teachers of music, all eager to do their part in assuring Washington its orchestra for another year. There was a cheerful, business-like spirit and a determination to carry the campaign through to a successful close by March 8, the date by which the $103,000 is to be raised.

Hans Kindler, conductor of the orchestra, was there for a short time at the beginning of the tea.

"We are modest in our request for 30 players for the orchestra," said Mr. Strong, "and our budget is the lowest of any of the 12 leading orchestras of the country. It is up to all of you to 'sell' the orchestra to the city. This is a campaign which is neither to provide for the sick nor to feed the starving. It is one into which we can enter with lighter hearts than the others, for it is to preserve something for the culture and the enjoyment of the community."

The meeting was in the nature of a rally at which the workers received final instructions. One of the admonitions from Mr. Strong was to leave behind no friend of the orchestra rather than to come off with a pledge unwillingly given. He urged the use of statistics as to the budget and requirements of the organization in answering questions which might be asked by contributors.

"Don't stop when you get your quota," he added, "keep going. There may be some who will not quite raise theirs and the surplus you collect will even it up."

Mrs. Howe emphasized the fact that "there is an answer to every question" about the orchestra and its needs.

Workers will report at headquarters in the Carlton daily, whether or not they have new pledges to turn in, and there will be a representative of the women's committee at the booth in the lobby from 10 to 5 throughout the campaign. The first of four luncheons for the workers will be at the Carlton tomorrow at 1:30, when early returns will be announced.

Mrs. Foster Adams, who is chairman of the women's business committee, was among the workers in the large gathering yesterday. Another was Mrs. Charles Bittinger, who heads the committee from the Orchestra Guild.

About 250 workers in the drive attended the tea and reception. Preceding it, the special gifts, women's business and associations committees held meetings of their workers at which final assignment of pledge cards was made and last minute instructions were given out.

Library Editor Honor Guest Of Women Writers

Kenneth Horan, author of "Oh Promise Me" and "Remember the Day" and literary editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, yesterday entertained members of the Woman's National Press Club with accounts of her early life in Michigan.

God and the Republican Party were law and gospel there in those days, she said. Everybody felt secure and knew exactly what to think, what to say and what to do. She described herself as "a monument of a day that is past"—although she looked neither like a monument nor a past era . . . Her descriptions of life in Jackson, the little town where her father published the Jackson Citizen, however, bore out her assertion that things have changed since the time she pictured.

She told about her father's newspaper, amusing stories of her own family and of guests who had visited them, and throughout her talk had her audience in bursts of laughter.

She is visiting Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church during her stay in the Capital and Mrs. Church was among the guests at the luncheon, at which Miss Helen Atwater presided in the absence of Doris Fleeson, the president.

Among other guests were Mme. Gustav Orlicz-Dreszer, who is here from Poland; Mrs. Louis Caldwell and a group of delegates to the N. E. A. convention in Atlantic City and the convention on Progressive Education Association in New York, who have been in Washington for several days. They included Mrs. Gertrude H. Rounsavelle, a member of the Los Angeles Board of Education, of which she is a former president; Mrs. Laurel Olson Knezevich, president of the Los Angeles Elementary Teachers' Club, and Miss Mary E. Frick, president of the High School Teachers' Association of Los Angeles. Mrs. Rounsavelle has been active in parent-teacher work in California for 20 years and now is State treasurer of the organization.

Over The Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Though he sailed for England only yesterday, legends already cluster around tough, rough-hewn Joe Kennedy's ambassadorship to the Court of St. James's . . . This preview story, already being told gleefully around the State Department, comes via magnetic, vivacious Peggy Biddle, wife of Tony Biddle, our Ambassador to Poland.

* * * *

Mrs. Tony Biddle.

The Kennedys, so the prophetic yarn goes, had been invited to dinner at Buckingham Palace. . . . Mrs. Kennedy arrived in time, but the dinner hour came and no Joe . . . . King George and Queen Elizabeth waited with royal patience.

But when the soup was 20 minutes cold Dowager Queen Mary suggested crisply that Mrs. Kennedy check up on her husband.

* * * *

She could not reach him by phone at the embassy, so she hurried home to hunt high and low . . . . Finally she peeped into the nursery-dormitory . . . . There on a cot lay Ambassador Joe in his satin knee breeches, fast asleep; she had absent-mindedly put him to bed with the other Kennedys in short pants.

"—diplomatic error at bedtime"

POTOMAC RAZZLE-DAZZLE: The White House has the definite confidential impression that no matter what Senator Hiram Johnson says, or how loudly, he's not really against the Big Navy . . . . And Sumner Welles is too diplomatic to breathe aloud any suspicion that statesmen up for re-election this year see a chance for a loud, harmless and impressive cockadoodle about foreign affairs.

* * * *

A few murmurs are heard because the billiard room in the basement of the White House is locked up during receptions . . . It is probably a wise precaution; some of the guests might wander downstairs for a few games of kelly pool and leave their wives to the tender mercies of the junior aides, who are busy enough as it is.

* * * *

Oddly enough, the Russian Embassy seems to be raising popularity among Washington's rightists . . . Mrs. E. T. Meredith, widow of the late Secretary of Agriculture had vowed (like many another conservative) that she would never, never sip Soviet tea or champagne there . . . But she was on hand at the last Russ party, having a wonderful time, like several other pillars of conservatism.

"—Naval Affairs sees the world"

Best show-of-the-month in the Capital has been the hearing on the Big Navy bill . . . One elderly retired general staggered before the House committee under the burden of a big box full of globes of the world, on which he has been spending part of his retirement pay.

* * * *

The general distributed these globes solemnly to the committee members, to illustrate his views, placing them on the high horseshoe bench behind which the members sit.

His views were a little tinctured with reminiscences of his days in the Philippines . . . And from somewhere a wisecrack popped up about including the moon in the American defense and fortification system.

* * * *

Senator Vandenberg was to have introduced Sinclair Lewis at his lecture tonight, but the Senator was stymied by a previous engagement to dine at the Peruvian Embassy . . . The citizens of Sauk Center, Gopher Prairie and Zenith, organized as the Minnesota Society, will make the novelist feel at home at a party afterward.

Sinclair Lewis.

The old red brick Dewey house on Sixteenth street—the one given the old warrior by a grateful nation, which he later gave to his bride amid national cries of dismay—is being remodeled at last; it has stood vacant for years . . . Once it was offered to the American Legion as a national headquarters; but the legionnaires bought the one next door to the Corcoran and Cohen apartment . . . Now the Dewey mansion seems destined to become a high-class boarding house.

Hart to Observe His 20th Year As Eastern Principal Tomorrow

Charles Hart, principal of Eastern High School.

Warns Student Body He Will Play Hooky if Any Celebration Is Attempted; Graduate of School He Now Heads.

Charles Hart will mark his twentieth anniversary as principal of Eastern High School tomorrow, but few of his pupils will known about it until they read this.

"I haven't missed many school days," Hart said yesterday, "but if I get wind of any kind of a celebration I certainly shall stay at home tomorrow." He doesn't like celebrations.

Now the District's largest high school, Eastern had an enrollment of 384 pupils when Hart became principal in 1918. This number had increased to 1,100 by 1923, the year the present building was completed. It now stands at 3,000, Hart said.

Hart graduated from Eastern in 1895. "The pupils have changed but little, not only since I became principal, but since I was a pupil," he recalled yesterday. "I still see students of the same types as those I went to school with."

Even the faculty has remained in two respects. Miss Bertha L. Gardner, who taught Hart English, and Miss Lewanna Wilkins, under whom he studied biology, still teach at Eastern and are among the best instructors on the staff, according to their pupil-principal.

Life is a lot easier for the present-day pupil, Hart believes. In his student days, anyone who failed one of five subjects had to repeat the five; now it is necessary to repeat only the course in which one fails.

This ruling is one sign of a growing tendency to keep children in school through senior high school, he said. It used to be that an entrance examination kept many from even starting a high school course. Now so much encouragement is given that 95 per cent of the city's junior high school graduates continue their studies.

The complex curriculum from which modern high school students can choose would have baffled their fathers and grandfathers.

Until recent years, Hart said, pupils could elect either an academic or a scientific course. The two courses were identical except that one included Latin, the other German.

While Hart was teaching at Business High School—he joined its faculty five years after ending his student days at Eastern—the first athletic instructor was hired. He rotated among the high schools, spending one day a week at each. Interest in athletics grew rapidly and soon afterward Hart himself was given the job of drawing up the city's first eligibility rules for student athletes.

In 1908 Hart was named head of the department of business practice in local schools. Three years later he and W. Allen Davis, later principal of Roosevelt High School, planned and organized the first system of high school banks.

Eastern's principals go in for long careers. C. M. Lacey Sites, under whom Hart went to school, resigned in 1895 to become a missionary in China. Despite bandits, wars and increasing age, Sites is still a missionary.

Hart expects to keep it up even longer. "Come and see me on my fortieth anniversary," was his closing remark.

Hyattsville High Clique Faces Quiz In Youth's Arrest

Alan Bowie, Prince Georges County State's attorney, yesterday asked police to question members of a Hyattsville High School clique who reportedly attended several "parties" at the home of Clay Cook, fellow student, who was charged with a statutory offense after he had been found with Lois Simms, 15-year-old choir singer, near Purcellville, Va., Sunday night.

Cook, who lives in Riverdale, Md., appeared in police court at Hyattsville yesterday for a preliminary hearing on the charge, but a postponement until next Wednesday was granted by Judge George B. Merrick on request of Bowie.

Officer Henry C. Briscoe will conduct the investigation of the parties, which preceded the Simms girl's disappearance after she had "cut" a class at the Hyattsville High School on St. Valentine's Day.

Cook, who had been held in jail at Hyattsville pending the hearing, was released yesterday

Small Claims Court Bill Is Reported Out

House Unit Also Orders Hearing March 9 on Numbers Act.

Palmisano Cites Lack of Attendance at Committee Meeting.

The House District Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill to establish a small claims court within the Municipal Court, and scheduled a public hearing for March 9 on the "anti-numbers" bill.

Only three members were present when the action was taken, as several were serving on the subcommittee which was conducting a hearing on the District tax bill at the time.

The action will place the small claims court bill on the House calendar for consideration in the next District day session, which occurs March 14. The bill was approved with a few minor amendments upon motion of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, in the absence of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the sub-committee which held hearings.

The small claims court bill passed the Senate last session. It was opposed by the District Bar Association during recent House hearings, but was indorsed by numerous civic and welfare organizations.

Under the proposed setup claims up to $50 could be settled without resort to customary judicial procedure and large cases would be settled by voluntary arbitration.

Chairman Palmisano, in suggesting a date for a hearing on the numbers bill, called attention to the small attendance at the committee meeting.

"It seems that those who wanted this bill brought up have lost interest in it," he remarked.

The hearing two weeks from yesterday will be conducted by the full committee. Officials of the United States attorney's office, Capt. George M. Little, of the police vice squad, and others will be summoned.

Iron Workers On U. S. Library Join aWlkout

Thirty-six iron workers employed on the new annex of the Library of Congress went on a strike yesterday in a three-cornered jurisdictional dispute which threatens to tie up all work on the structure.

The iron workers, together with the 23 elevator constructors who had previously walked out, are protesting the award to millwrights of the job of installing a book conveyor system in the annex. The $50,000 conveyor contract is in the hands of the Lamson Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.

Cannon Captured at Yorktown Center of New Fight on Return

Controversy over the possession of the cannon that Lafayette's soldiers captured, that Lafayette kissed, that the Watervliet Arsenal now possesses, to the disappointment of Park Service officials who want the relic for the restored Yorktown area, yesterday was emphatically renewed as follows:

Gov. Lehmann of New York urged the Secretary of War to rescind an order for removal of the weapon to Yorktown. Supporting his stand were the Albany Chamber of Commerce and Representative Byrne (Democrat), of New York.

Silent on the matter were Park Service officials, who said: "We haven't heard anything, but are expecting it momentarily." Silent, also, the Secretary of War, whose office would go no further than to admit receipt of the protests.

These protests first flared last summer when the Park Service received permission to move the cannon which has reposed for more than a century at Watervliet. Park officials hesitated in the face of the opposition. Last week they again ventured the idea of removing the cannon. Immediately the Secretary of War heard from Lehmann, Byrne and the Chamber of Commerce.

"It certainly is going to be difficult to get that cannon. We have never encountered such opposition before," a park official said.

The plan, simply, is to remove the weapon to its more historic seat, Yorktown, where the American and French forces captured it 156 years ago when Cornwallis surrendered. It was among a group given the Park Service as ornaments for the restored area in Virginia. Since 1825 it has been known as the Lafayette cannon. Lafayette, then on a tour of this country, is said to have recognized it as one his force captured. Tradition says he impulsively threw his arms about the weapon and kissed it. On his death in 1834 it was fired at half-hour intervals.

Representative Byrne wrote Secretary Woodring: "In view of the general opposition, I trust you can find it possible to cancel the order of removal."

Young Lawyers Have Great Opportunity to Aid Contracts of U. S. and Industry, Declares Reed

'The Barristers' Hear Address by Justice of Supreme Court.

Young lawyers of today have the greatest opportunity in the history of the profession to participate in the formulation of workable contracts between Government and business, Justice Stanley Reed, of the United States Supreme Court, told The Barristers, younger members of the District bar, last night.

It was the new Supreme Court justice's first public address since he took his oath of office several weeks ago.

The only speaker at the fourteenth annual dinner of the organization, composed of lawyers under 35 years of age, Justice Reed pointed to the fact that the main business structure of today has been built largely upon advice of members of the legal profession.

Closer Relationship.

"When the Constitution was signed and for many years after," Justice Reed said, "the biggest problem of lawyers was to organize business and see to it that it conformed with the various State laws.

"Modern methods of business communication have revolutionized industries and private business is becoming more closely connected with the Federal Government each day."

Declaring complicated problems of private industry today are not limited to any particular locality, Justice Reed asserted industries are constantly moving across State lines and causing definite relationships between the people and the Government.

More Co-operation.

Administrative law, Reed declared, has come about through increased co-operation between the Government and private business. Calling attention to the fact that all administrative rulings are subject to review in the courts, the justice pointed to the important role played by lawyers in building up flexible administrative regulations.

Guests of honor at the affair included United States Supreme Court Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, justices of the District courts, District Police Court judges and a number of high ranking Government officials.

Officers of the organization present at the meeting were Joseph C. McGarraghy, president; Charles E. Pledger, jr., vice president; Raymond Sparks, secretary, and B. Woodruff Weaver treasurer.

"Trial by Jury," a Gilbert and Sullivan production, was presented by the Columbia Light Opera Company of Washington. The show, a satirical jest at the courts of the nineteenth century, received hearty applause from the group.

More than 300 persons attended the affair, which was held in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Pilgrimage Made To Wilson's Tomb

Led by Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, president of the Women's National Democratic Club, 20 members of the group made their annual pilgrimage yesterday afternoon to the tomb of President Wilson in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral.

They were received by the Very Rev. Noble Powell, D. D., dean of the cathedral, who offered prayers in commemoration of the World War President.

Among those who participated in the services, which included the laying of a wreath, were Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Edward R. Stitt, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, and the Right Rev. Julius A. Atwood, retired Bishop of Arizona.

Colored Group Pickets Theater Where 'Birth of Nation' Is Given

The Klan rode in Washington last night on the screen of the Rialto Theater, where nearly 1,500 persons gathered for a return showing of the "Birth of a Nation," presented by the Film Society of Washington.

The film was described as a slander against the colored race by John P. Davis, national secretary of the congress and acting captain of the picket line. Davis said his organization had protested to District police officials against showing the film, because "it would create bad feelings." He added that the film had been banned in 70 cities of the United States.

Historical Value Stressed.

Fanning Hearon, of the Film Society executive committee, explained that the film had been chosen for its historical value in the development of the cinema. "It is the one outstanding film of all time. We chose it without regard to social implications."

Hearon said the performance was restricted to members of the society. He pointed out that "The Birth of a Nation" was opened to the public in Washington at a two-week run five years ago, and no riots followed.

With the Negro National Congress in the picket line, were representatives of various labor groups. Their hand-lettered placards carried such legends as:

"The Film Society is interested in the development of the movie. We are interested in the development of democracy."

Called Glorification.

"The Birth of a Nation glorifies K. K. K.

"We suffer. They laugh."

Within the entrance of the theater, members of the Women's Trade Union Council distributed leaflets, stating "the picture of colored people presented in this film is false, slanderous and dangerous to the continued peace and progress in this community."

Hearon recalled that the Film Society had been criticized by other groups for showing "The Spanish Earth" on the ground that it was loyalist propaganda.

Among the sponsors of the Society are Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull and Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette.

School Chiefs Act to Renew Play Parleys

Board Dissatisfied With Plan for Unification of Recreation.

Move Seeks Backing of Other Groups for Co-ordination.

Expressing dissatisfaction with Senator William H. King's proposed bill for unification of recreation facilities in the District, two committees of the Board of Education yesterday urged a conference of representatives of all local agencies involved to renew discussions of co-ordination.

Board members, attending a joint meeting of their committees on legislation and community use of buildings, approved the action of Henry I. Quinn, board member, and Superintendent Frank W. Ballou who opposed the bill "in its present form" when it was brought before a meeting of the coordinating committee last fall. Quinn was the school board's representative on the committee.

However, Quinn's report, outlining the board's position regarding a program of coordinated recreation and recommending a course of action, was not approved in entirety.

All-Inclusive Parley.

Robert A. Maurer, board vice president, declared the school board should neither support nor oppose legislation until its members carefully had studied problems.

"Certainly we are for co-ordination," Maurer said, "and we want to voice our willingness to co-operate in every possible way to bring about a desirable recreational program."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, urged the board to consider as its objective establishment of a worthy recreational program which would be available to the people of Washington at reasonable expense to the taxpayers.

A conference of representatives of all recreational agencies in the District, including the board of education will be recommended at next meeting of the board March 9.

Early Action Hoped.

Committee members yesterday expressed hope the conference could be called immediately.

Said the committees' resolution:

"Your committees further recommend that this board reiterate and make known to other interested agencies and the public generally that it is ready and willing to co-operate to the fullest extent in carrying out the provisions of the co-ordination agreement, approved by us January 10, 1936.

"Your committees also recommend that the Board of Education express its willingness to meet with representatives of the agencies directly concerned for the purpose of further consideration of problems involved, and what, if any, legislation is necessary to the end that the largest amount of worthy recreational activities shall be made available to the people of Washington at reasonable expense to the taxpayers."

Attack Brings Extra Police to Sixteenth St.

Woman Laundry Aide Foils Thug Believed One in Earlier Holdup.

An extra detail of police last night was ordered to patrol Sixteenth street northwest as Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, directed his men to search for a colored thug who attacked, robbed and beat a woman Social Security Board worker Tuesday.

As the detective chief commanded his officers to "get that man," a bandit who answered his description was foiled by the cool nerve of a woman laundry employe when he tried to rob her shop in the 1300 block of U street northwest. Police said they thought the would-be robber, who fled when he was outwitted, might be the brutal criminal who slugged and robbed Mrs. Kathryn Goodwin, 39, in the 1100 block of Sixteenth street.

"He is a vicious criminal and will repeat his attacks if he is not apprehended," said Thompson, who sent three squads of plain-clothes men in search of the husky colored robber.

Regains Consciousness.

In Episcopal Hospital, where Mrs. Goodwin was taken after she was beaten by the hoodlum, physicians said she had a fractured nose and slight concussion of the brain, and that both her eyes had been blackened. She had regained consciousness yesterday, however.

Mrs. Goodwin, who lives in the Jefferson Apartments, was attacked as she was walking toward her home. The thief grabbed her purse containing $25. When she screamed he struck her face. She fell to the sidewalk. Then the bandit stood over her and struck her.

The laundry employe who thwarted a holdup late yesterday was Mrs. Annie M. Taylor, manager of the Frazee-Potomac chain plant in the 1300 block of U street.

Laundry Thief Flees.

Mrs. Taylor, who lives at 2703 North Capitol street, was startled when the door of the laundry opened and a husky, suspicious-looking colored man stepped inside. In his pocket was something which resembled a gun. He pointed it at Mrs. Taylor beneath his coat. Just then a customer entered.

Striding toward the intruder, Mrs. Taylor asked calmly what he wanted.

"Go on, miss, wait on the customer first," he said.

"You were in here first," said Mrs. Taylor in a steady voice, "tell me what you want or get out."

The colored man fled.

Gang of Five Caught.

Meanwhile, five young men, two of them teen-age members of a nearby CCC camp, were in the custody of Washington and Arlington County, Va., police last night as suspects in an attempt to shoot a policeman and the slug-robbery of a partially blind, 18-year-old youth.

The policemen, Private Horace Childress, of the First Precinct, escaped death only because the gun missfired.

Two members of the gang, 18 and 19-year-old CCC campers, were arrested by Arlington County police who cornered them in a secluded section of the Department of Agriculture Experimental Farm after they had been chased by Washington motorcycle patrolmen following the robbery.

Warren Gessling, the 18-year-old partly blind robbery victim, last night identified all members of the gang, police said, as the five who severly beat and robbed him of $10 on the Catholic University campus last Friday night.

Dr. Lamson-Scribner Funeral Set for Today

Funeral services for Dr. Frank Lamson-Scribner, 88, noted agrostologist who died in Garfield Hospital Tuesday, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the Joseph F. Birch's Sons funeral home, 3034 M street northwest. Interment will be private. Dr. Harry B. Humphrey, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, will read the services.

For nearly 20 years, Dr. Lamson-Scribner was in charge of exhibitions for the Department of Agriculture. He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, member of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, New Jersey and Pennsylvania horticultural societies, Buffalo Academy of Sciences and Torrey Botany Club.

Discount Association Dangles Midas Bait Before the District

Successor to Chain-Letter Craze Offers Possibility of $640 Collection for $5.95 Investment; Within Law, Says Seal.

The chain-letter craze which swept Washington last year and finally waged a losing battle with postal authorities, has a successor.

It was revealed yesterday that the District Discount Association, 1020 Vermont avenue northwest, is offering the possibility of a $640 collection for an investment of $5.95, which they term "dues."

At the same time, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, after studying the contents of the application for membership into the association, declared "as far as I can see the thing is not violating any District laws."

Under the business privilege tax laws, the association was granted a license on February 10. The license expires June 30.

It's all very simple, as explained by the instructions, rules and regulations contained on the membership application, which also includes the names of seven persons who have preceded you into the association.

Some of the rules follow:

1. A person desiring to join and become a member, must bring (in person or by messenger) this original application and attached copy, to our office, and must there register and obtain at our office, two new applications with which to secure two additional members. This original should then be registered by him for identification. We remind you again, applications, registrations or payments will not be accepted or credited if sent by mail.

It should be explained at this point that the applicant for membership, who most likely has been given one of the two applications, which each new member receives, must place his name at the bottom of the seven-name list. On the application there are two arrows, one pointing to the first name on the list and the other to the place at the bottom of the list where the new member affixes his signature and address.

The application states "this new member (this is the one in No. 8 position) pays this member (this is the one in the No. 1 position) but not until the New Member's Name also reaches top position and he is so notified."

Now, here is where the Discount appears.

2. Your $5.95 (95 cents to register now and $5 dues later on) entitles you to a discount coupon book, and makes you eligible to receive dues from succeeding members, up to $640. You should save at least the total cost of your registration fee and membership dues solely by the use of the discount coupons.

The discount coupons are inclosed in a book called "Discount Service Book." Nine business concerns, including a cleaning and dyeing establishment, haberdasher, leather goods, auto repairs, millinery, foot specialist, dress shop, electrical appliances and beauty shop, are ready to offer members a 10 per cent discount "on all purchases of $1 or more." Six coupons of each establishment are included. Coupons are void after August 3, 1938.

Now is explained how the dues operates.

3. The names and addresses of the seven members who have preceded you in the association are listed below. Upon payment of 98 cents (to cover registration and general expenses), you are entitled to have our office make two carbon copies (and only two) of this application, omitting the name and address in the first position, moving up the six names one position, and inserting your name and address in the seventh position. These extra applications are to be given to two friends or relatives who agree to register promptly and likewise obtain additional co-operative new members.

4. As a consideration to all others who have joined or are about to join, and in consideration of the similar promises of such persons heretofore made, each new member must promise and agree to secure two new members for the association, and must guarantee and agree that when his name advances to the first position, and he is informed and notified thereof in manner set forth in his agreement, he will then deliver and pay over his dues of $5 to the member who was in first position on his application when he became a member of and joined the association.

Here you are reminded to bear in mind that "you pay the dues of $5 only once." You are also reminded that "you are not paying the association the dues, you are paying the entire amount of the dues to the member eligible to receive them."

Anyone who fails to pay his dues within two days after he is notified, that he has reached the top position, is disqualified. Furthermore, the association does not guarantee that the notice, by telephone or messenger, will reach the member personally.

Former Attache of Egyptian Legation Victim of Pneumonia.

Last summer Mr. Zoulfikar and his family left for Egypt on a vacation. While they were there he was transferred and became secretary to the chief in the Egyptian cabinet at Abdine Palace in Cairo.

Jersey Girl Patricide Wins Suspended Term

The girl admitted she killed her father, but said she "only meant to scare him," when he menaced her and her mother in a drunken fury last January 6.

Robber Flees, Then Returns To Be Caught

Taxi Holdup in Which Thief Refunded 'Gas' Money Leads to Jail.

It wasn't a "pipe" dream, even Conrad Steele, the cab driver, admitted last night—but it was just as fantastic—and it all ended hapily, with the alleged robber in jail and the money recovered.

Steele lives in the 400 block of Fifth street northeast. Last night he picked up a passenger who ordered him to drive to Wisconsin and Western avenues northwest.

"Now," said the passenger, "put your hands up, because this is a holdup and I am going to rob you, see!"

Returns "Gas" Money.

The bandit took $2.05, all the money Steele had, and then, still pressing what felt like a gun into his victim's ribs, said:

"Is that all you got?"

Steele nodded and the bandit handed back 50 cents.

"You'll need that for gas, buddy," he said. "Now, how does this car work?"

The man took the wheel.-At Western avenue and Forty-first street northwest he went through a red light and Steele suggested they stop. As the car slowed down he grabbed the keys and started shouting "holdup."

Leaping from the taxi, the man ran up the street. A crowd gathered. Policemen J. W. Carroll and R. T. Brown, in a scout car, arrived.

He Was "Hungry".

Meanwhile the alleged robber, who had sprinted two blocks, paused and looked back. Then he returned and mingled with the crowd as Steele described him to the police.

"Why, there's the guy," shouted Steele.

Police Legion Auxiliary Hears O. C. Holleran

In the United States we have no use for any "ism" but Americanism, O. C. Holleran, chairman of the Americanism commission of the American Legion, told members of the Washington Police Post, No. 29, last night.

Addressing members of the auxiliary at the Thomson School in an "Americanism and National Defense" program, Holleran blamed activities of foreign dictatorships for the condition of the world today, which is "far worse than conditions 20 years ago."

"In the world of today in which law is lost," the speaker said, "scores of organizations are devoted to destroying our national government and breaking up the principles of self-government."

"As long as America is free and governed by the majority," Halleran asserted, "dictatorships are in contsant danger, and since they can't attack us openly, they are boring in gradually with their Communistic, pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist organizations."

Charging that anti-American organizations are attacking through the schools, Holleran said the legion had successfully combated this attempt and "the schools of Washington are as much American as in any part of the country and the legion will keep them that way."

Lieut. Horace W. Lineburg, past commander of the legion and chief of the public relations division of the Metropolitan Police Department, spoke in place of James O'Connor, national chairman of the national defense committee, who was unable to attend.

Mrs. Ola D. Lee, president of the auxiliary, presided and Mrs. Beatrice Jacobs, department vice chairman, spoke briefly.

Colored Suspect Held in Forgery

William Smith, colored, of New York City, was arrainged before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday charged with forging Government obligations.

Turnage continued the case until this morning when a hearing will be held. Smith was ordered held under $5,000 bail. He was arrested by Treasury Department agents several days ago. Turnage said he understood the alleged forgery was in connection with relief checks.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Safety First.

When a player has no cards in a suit and has found that some other suit is satisfactory as a trump he is inclined to be ambitious, unless he has heard of "duplication." The fact that he has no losers in the suit of which he is void is what stirs him to slam ambitions. The experienced player, however, recognizes the fact that his partner's main strength may be in that void suit and that just as the strength of the hand is duplicated, so the weakness may be duplicated if both players are weak in the same suit. It was fear of such duplication which caused South to refrain from trying for the slam in today's hand. In fact, he had to exercise great care to make his game contract.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the deuce of diamonds and declarer saw no reason to refuse the free finesse. East covered the Jack of diamonds with the Queen, and South trumped with the deuce of spades. South cashed his King of hearts and returned a heart to the Ace, discarding his two remaining hearts on dummy's Ace and King of diamonds. Dummy's heart was now ruffed by declarer's nine of spades.

Declarer now cashed the King of spades and led a small spade toward dummy. When West followed with the seven, dummy's Jack was played. Since this held the trick the contract as safe, even if declarer lost all three club tricks.

Declarer's line of play and final spade finesse may seem slightly double-dummyish, but actually it was fool-proof. True, South suspected that West, rather than East, was long in spades, since the opening lead and the fall of the hearts marked East with nine cards in the red suits. But even had East won the second round of spades with the Queen, declarer would have had a trump remaining both in his own hand and in the dummy and, regardless of subsequent defense, could not lose more than two club tricks in addition to the spade trick already lost.

Even if the second trump lead had revealed that East, rather than West, had started with three trumps to the Queen, declarer would have been safe. He would merely have won the second trump trick with dummy's ace and returned a club from dummy. Once again the opponents could take no more than two clubs and a trump.

MEN LOVE Peppy GIRLS!

IF you are happy and peppy and full of fun, men will take you places. But, if you are cross and always tired out, men won't like you. Men don't like "quiet" girls. They want girls who are full of pep.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening discomforts from the functional disorders which women endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Pinkham's Compound, made especially for women from Nature's wholesome herbs and roots, has helped women for over 60 years.

Make a note NOW to get a bottle today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—let Nature help you be the lively, peppy girl you should be.

Mann Starts Like a Whirlwind but Louis Tames Him Down to a Breeze

Connecticut Boxer Down Four Times

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Back to the pugilistic wars after a layoff of six months, Louis rallied from a shaky start to cut Mann down and knock him out in the third round of a 15-round match before a near-capacity Garden crowd.

The end came in 1:46 of the third after Mann had taken a count of nine in the second round, been saved by the bell and then battered to the floor three times in the abbreviated final chapter.

Mann, looking like he had been put through a meat-chopper, took the final count in one corner of the ring, resting on one knee, but otherwise so punch-drunk that he didn't even appear to hear Referee Arthur Donovan's final "ten."

Hurt by Challenger.

The champion put an abrupt and convincing end to the match with a high-explosive brand of punching power after being surprised and actually hurt by his challenger's brisk early bid.

A hard right to the chin that shook Louis, in the second round, and sent him back to the ropes, blinking and bewildered, appeared to touch off the fireworks. It was one of several robust blows with which Mann connected during the first round and a half, while Louis looked the situation over. It aroused the champion to such an extent that his counterblast quickly had the ambitious Connecticut entry on the floor.

Left jabs and hooks by Louis softened Mann for the lethal finishing touches, but he toppled for the first time from a hard right cross. He had sufficient possession of his faculties to realize it was a good time to take "nine," but he ran into another blast of leather upon regaining his feet. Louis knocked Nathan to the ropes and buckled him with lefts to the body, ripe for the "kill" when the second-round bell sounded.

Mann, bleeding from the mouth and nose, fought back courageously in the third, but the end was in sight. The challenger, by now so dazed he didn't know much about what was going on, took counts of only two and three seconds as the champion's two-fisted barrage flattened him. He weathered another half-minute of punishment before going down for the last time, from the impact of a terrific right hand to the jaw.

Boos and Cheers Mingle.

Mingled boos and cheers greeted the finish to a title bout that to all intents and purposes was strictly a "tune up" for the forthcoming $1,000,000 return match between Champion Louis and his conqueror, Max Schmeling, of Germany, in June.

A crowd of 19,490 spectators contributed to gross gate receipts of $111,698.49 to see New York's first indoor bout for the world heavyweight crown since Jack Dempsey flattened Bill Brennan in the old Garden in 1920.

The net gate amounted to $95,314.35, with Louis colecting 40 per cent and Mann 12½ per cent.

Louis, scaling an even 200 pounds to his rival's 193½, looked impressive to ringsiders in his second defense of the title he won last June from Jim Braddock. His timing and all around display of punching power not only was reminiscent of the days when he was a meteoric title contender, but contrasted with his 15-round performance against British Tommy Farr last August. If the object was to put the "old Joe Louis" back on exhibit, it was an artistic success.

Kayoed for First Time.

Mann, knocked out for the first time in his career, gave several thousand partisans from his home State a chance to cheer in the first round and a half. Nathan won the first round, on points, and hurt Louis with left hooks as well as several well-timed rights to the head. The challenger continued his aggressive tactics early in the second round, fighting from a half-crouch that bothered Louis, but his attempt to "shoot the works" quickly came to grief.

Once Louis discarded caution and went to work with both hands, the fight became a rout. Mann's show of courage under fire stirred the onlookers but otherwise did no more than prolong the inevitable a few seconds. He was the thirty-first knockout victim in 38 professional fights for Louis.

Preliminaries.

The opening four-round preliminary resulted in a victory on decision for Elzear Thompson, Chicago negro, 223, over Gene Bonin, New Haven, 188 3-4. There were no knockdowns but Bonin was cut and bruised by his heavier opponent's punches.

Dave Clark, Detroit negro, 175, outpointed Phillip (Buddy) Ryan, of Newark, N. J. 173½, in six rounds. Ryan, swinging from the floor, tried hard to land a haymaker, but succeeded only in taking a boxing lesson.

Jim Robinson, of Philadelphia, 203, won a close decision in six rounds from Dick Hogan, Boston, 185.

The referee was Arthur Donovan, the judges were Marty Monroe and George Lecron.

The principals entered the ring at 10:05. Mann received a more vociferous reception than the champion.

There was another argument over the champion's gloves, a renewal of the dispute that took place at the official weighing.

U. of Maryland Beats St. John's Quint, 38-29

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Maryland University's courtmen continued to pick on their State opponents last night, using the St. John's of Annapolis five as a medium of scoring their eighth consecutive victory, by a 38-to-29 margin in Ritchie Coliseum.

Once more it was the accurate side-court shooting of Waverley Wheeler that turned the tide for the Terps and sent the score from 24-23 to 28-23 and a margin that the Johnnies could not overcome.

The visitors, a poor fourth in the Maryland Collegiate Conference, gave the Terps a scare for 35 of the 40 minutes, threatening to repeat an upset triumph of last year, but wilted under Wheeler's sixth and seventh field goals and a pair of snow birds by Eddie Johnson and Pershing (3-point) Mondorff.

Wheeler scored 17 points and continued his climb to the District scoring leadership, while a teammate, George Knepley, also a contender, was content with three floor goals for 6 points.

The State Capital lads scored four points before the Terps went into action and assumed a 9-7 advantage, a margin they increased by a point as the half ended at 17 to 14.

Maryland proceeded to widen the margin early in the second period to 24-15, before Rowe and Tarantino pulled the losers to 23-24. Here Wheeler and Mondorff scored four baskets in quick succession to put the game beyond recall.

Lack of reserves was a telling factor in the game, as Coach Donohue of St. John's was forced to call on two inexperienced players in relieving his tiring first stringers in the final half.

Eddie John's six points tied Knepley for runner-up berth among the Terp scorers, while Jimmy Rowe, with nine, led the Johnnies. Ross, with seven, trailed Rowe, while Johnny Lambros, although only scoring four points, was the spark-plug of the attack.

Patty Takes First Match

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—The going was tough today for some of the favorites in the first round of the South Atlantic Women's Golf tournament, but Patty Berg advanced with ease.

Firing a par 38 on the first nine, the Minneapolis school girl ousted Mrs. Joseph L. Lawler, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 7 and 5. She continued to display the brand of golf which gave her medal honors yesterday and made her the favorite to win her fourth consecutive winter tournament.

Marion Miley, of Fort Pierce, Fla., former winner of the South Atlantic, fought an uphill battle to down Marion McDougall, of Portland, Oreg., on the twenty-first hole. Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., defeated Laddie Irwin, of Montclair, N. J., on the nineteenth.

Two other contenders won by comfortable margins. Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., defeated Mrs. W. R. Stafford, of New York, 7 and 5, and Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., 1937 winner, won over Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore, 5 and 4.

Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, eliminated Mrs. E. F. Cary, of Minneapolis, 3 and 2; Sally Guth, of Webster Grove, Mo., defeated Elizabeth L. Wing, of Evanston, Ill., 4 and 3.

Jane Cothran Jameson, of West Palm Beach, scored a 5 and 4 triumph over Mrs. Lillian K. Zech, of Chicago.

Dizzy Dean Signs; Ends Annual 'War'

By the Associated Press.

Winter Haven, Fla., Feb. 23.—Dizzy Dean ended his annual salary squabble with the St. Louis Cardinals today by signing a contract for the 1938 season.

"Ole Diz" motored here from his Bradenton, Fla., winter home, shook hands with Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the club, went into a hotel room huddle with the boss and signed on the dotted line all within two and a half hours.

Neither Dean nor Rickey would disclose the salary figure, but reports soon were circulated that Dizzy agreed to pitch this year for about $17,500. He previously said he would demand $20,000. He received about $27,000 last year.

The big moundsman returned the first contract the Cards sent him, saying he expected to take a salary reduction, but was not in the mood for a slash of "more than $10,000." Rickey didn't say at the time how much he had offered Dean, but the figure was reported to be around $15,000.

All smiles, Dizzy emerged from the conference today, declaring he was mighty pleased and would report for spring training at the Cards' St. Petersburg camp, March 2. His only comment about the salary arrangement was "it suits me."

He said he felt sure he would have a better season this year than he had in 1937 when he won 13 games, lost 10 and finished third among National League pitchers in effectiveness. He quit playing golf recently to "rest up" for spring training.

Today's conference between Dean and Rickey was the quietest and most business like in the series they have held each year about the pitcher's objections to the pay offered him. Usually salary squabbles brought on hot words and they walked out on each other several times during the annual confab.

Hilltoppers Close Home Season With Flashy Victory.

By Bob Garrison.

Refusing to quit after taking a first half drubbing, Georgetown University's hustling Hoya basketball team thundered down the stretch last night at Tech High gym, overtook Carnegie Tech in the last two minutes and outdistanced the Skibos to win a thrilling Eastern Conference game, 45-41.

It was the Hilltoppers' last home game and for a long while—until the last three minutes, to be exact—it looked as though they would bow out in defeat. But then a crowd of 1,000 persons saw the home club post its fifth conference victory and gain revenge for an earlier season defeat the Pittsburgh boys had hung on them in the Smokey City.

A 33-to-21 half-time deficit that resulted from some downright sensational play by the visitors, confronted the Hoyas when they returned to the floor for the second half. The Engineers had looked like a million dollars in these first 20 minutes, shooting with deadly accuracy and passing with clock-like precision.

It required a long uphill fight to finally overcame the mountainous lead, but the Hoyas kept coming Big Capt. Mike Petrosky and Lanky Joe Murphy, center and forward, respectively, set the comeback pace. Murphy bagged 17 points in the triumph, and Petrosky 14, but the whole team can share the glory, as every man maintained the neck-break pace until the game was won.

Petrosky started the rally, dropping in two snowbird shots as the second half opened. Murphy and John Schmitt took the cue and the Hoyas took an improved position mid-way in the period, trailing 38-29.

Significant in the strong finish that followed was the absence from the game of Tommy Nolan, usual field general, who was removed for a substitute at that point. From thereon, Petrosky and Murphy took turns scoring. When Murphy would miss, which wasn't often, Petrosky would convert his errors by tapping the ball through the rim from the rebound.

With three minutes remaining Ed Kurtka sunk a long set shot to tip the score at 39-all and then a minute later Murphy scored on a one-hander from the side to give the local club its lead that was to mean victory.

The Skibos came to 41-40 soon

Terps' Boxers Draw Byes in Four Matches

Pairings Arranged at Meeting Here; Maryland Team Distinct Threat in Southern Conference Bouts Tomorrow and Saturday.

Maryland University's Terrapin boxing team, tourney dark-horse, now appears a distinct threat to successfully defend its Southern Conference championship, when the twelfth annual tournament opens at College Park tomorrow night.

Defending team champion, without a single defending champion entered in the classic, Maryland received byes in first round draws for four classes. The draw was held yesterday afternoon at the Capitol Park Hotel with Geary Eppley, athletic director of Maryland University, officiating as chairman of the tourney.

Only Benny Alperstein, national inter-collegiate lightweight champion, who has fought at 145 pounds this season, received a tough first round assignment. Entered in the 125-pound class by Coach Heinie Miller, he was paired with Johnny "Ripper" Murray Clemson entry. Alperstein, one of three Terps seeded No. 2, was given second favored position behind Joe Murnick, University of North Carolina representative.

Jose De Peralta, who has fought but once for the Old Liners, will meet Russell, North Carolina State. John Egan, the third Terp seeded in the second spot, will meet John Sowder, V. P. I., in the 175-pound class.

Danny Farrar, Duke 145-pounder, odds-on favorite to win in his class division, was seeded No. 1 and then paired with Bobby Jones, of Clemson. It marks the third time in three years that Jones has drawn Farrar in the first round, and will be seeking his first triumph.

Joe Henderson, Maryland heavyweight, drew his bye in the upper bracket, but will be faced with the winner of the Hugh Rogers, Citadel, and Ed Hubbard, U. N. C. entry. Rogers is seeded No. 1 and favorite to win in the heavy class.

Blow-by-Blow

ROUND ONE.

Mann came out moving fast and threw a long left that grazed Joe's head. They exchanged lefts in midring. Mann ducked and gave ground as he took a stinging left to the head. Louis slowly pursued the challenger, but backed up as Mann suddenly lashed both hands to the head. Mann connected hard to the head with both hands and drove Louis to the ropes. Joe was hurt as well as surprised.

The champion boxed cautiously while Mann looked for an opening. Both missed long rights and then covered. They rushed together momentarily in midring and a slight trickle of blood came from Mann's nose.

ROUND TWO.

Louis ducked inside a hard right swing and worked his left jab to the challenger's face. Blood streamed from Mann's nose and he was bleeding from the mouth after taking a hard left hook. Mann sparred for an opening, but ran into a stiff left to the face. Mann rushed Louis to the ropes, but was wild with both hands. Joe was cautious, but his left hand did considerable execution. Mann suddenly turned the tide with a two-fisted rush, connecting hard with both hands as rushed Joe to the ropes. They slugged at a furious pace and Louis floored Mann for a count of nine with a smashing right to the face.

Louis unleased a terrific barrage to the head and had the challenger groggy and on the ropes when the bell ended the round. Louis' round.

ROUND THREE.

Mann dropped for a count of two as he took heavy punishment. The challenger jumped back into the fray, fighting furiously against heavy odds. They leaned their heads together and swung together like longshoremen. Louis floored Mann for a count of three with a smashing hard right. Mann, bleeding and groggy, got up to take another terrific blast of punches. Louis poured leather to the challenger's head and dropped him for the final count of 10. The end came after a minute 56 seconds of the round.

Mann 'Out' in Second; Did Not Know When Kayo Landed

By Eddie Brietz,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Feb. 23.—"I just went out there and started bopping him," drawled Joe Louis after his smashing three-round knockout of Nathan Mann tonight.

The champion, who hardly got up a good sweat in the brief workout, took his second successful defense of his heavyweight title entirely in stride. He was so fresh he didn't lie down on returning to his dressing room.

"He hit me some good punches in the first and second rounds, but they didn't hurt," he said. "I don't think he hits as hard as some of the other fellows I've whipped."

"Didn't that right in the second round hurt some?" a reporter asked.

"No; I felt it, but it didn't hurt none."

"It annoyed you a little, though, didn't it?"

"Well, I reckon it did sort of wake me up. That's when I really started to work. Looks like I was a little slow warming up, don't it?"

Louis, who feels he has struck his old-time stride again, wants to defend his crown again in April if Mike Jacobs can dig up an opponent. Also, he is willing to go to the post in May, before his June fight with Max Schmeling.

Mann said he didn't remember a thing after Louis caught him with a savage left late in the second round until he heard Referee Arthur Donovan call "ten" after the knockout punch. The entire third round was a blank to him, he said.

"I didn't see the blow that knocked me out. I don't remember being knocked down in the second round. That Louis sure can punch. It's been so long since I was on the floor I just forgot what to do.

"I was in there gambling to win and put all I had into it while it lasted. Louis hurt me plenty, but I'll bet some of those rights I shot into him in the first and second rounds hurt him, too. It's too bad I had to let all those swell Connecticut folks down."

Lawrin, $4.90 Favorite, Wins Hialeah Mile Feature by Half Length

Brush Hook Trails Game Colt to Wire

Trainer Jones' Horse Takes Race; Purse to Tatterdemalion.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 23.—Lawrin, the colt that was advance favorite for the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes until his crushing defeat in the Bahamas Handicap, surged back into the limelight here today when he spotted plenty of weight to four older horses named for the Widener Cup and won in a drive by a half length. Carrying the Kansas City, Mo., silks of Herbert W. Woolf's Woolford Farm, the brown son of Insco ran the 1 mile of the featured Grade B handicap in 1:37 flat and was a $4.90 favorite.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Brush Hook was second, a length and a half before DeWitt Page's Maeriel. W. J. Hirsch's Columbiana, winner of the Widener a year ago, was fourth, and Dellor, third in the classic last March.

Ben Jones, Lawrin's trainer, reported that Lawrin came out of the Bahamas with cuts behind, but the colt came back shortly afterward and finished third to Galapas and Maetall. Lavengro became the Flamingo favorite by wining the Bahamas.

Lawrin today carried 106 pounds, or 1 under the scale. He gave Brush Hook 14 pounds, Maerial 20, Columbiana 8 and Dellor 7. Johnny Longden was astride the game 3-year-old for his second score of the afternoon.

Lawrin was the second horse of the day to jump into real prominence for a coming stake. In the previous race, a Grade C handicap of 1 mile, Thomas J. Healey's 5-year-old C. V. Whitney castoff, Tatterdemalion, won by five lengths under 122 pounds, thus taking a conspicuous place in the Widener Cup line-up. Lawrin, while not winning easily, ran three-fifths of a second faster in regaining lost prestige for the Flamingo. He and Lavengro now appear the standout pair.

Breaking in front, Lawrin disposed of Columbiana in the first six furlongs. He then showed his courage by standing off the strong challenges of Brush Hook and Maerial in a long, hard drive.

MODEST QUEEN, quickest to begin, drew out in the run out of the chute and held away thereafter, winning with something in reserve. THROTTLE WIDE broke forwardly, went in nearest pursuit of the leader for the entire trip, and held HIGHER BRACKET safe in the final drive. HIGHER BRACKET, on the outside all the way, was inclined to bear in approaching the furlong pole and Wall was compelled to ease her off her opponents, continued gamely when straightened out, but was unable to better her position.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:35. Winner, M. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME ME, $8.70, $3.40, $2.70; SCOTTISH MARY, $3.30, $2.60; PRETTY BUSY, $3.20.

TIME ME followed the leaders on the outside under slight restraint until midway around the lower turn, moved up gamely when called upon, but was carried very wide by PRETTY BUSY entering the stretch and wore down SCOTTISH MARY in the final furlong and won going away. SCOTTISH MARY took command with a rush leaving the backstretch, but could not save ground the remainder of the trip, but was no match for the winner when challenged. PRETTY BUSY, prominent throughout, bore out entering the stretch, yet held the others safe.

Daily Double, Modest Queen and Time Me, Paid $33.40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONTINUITY, $12.80, $5.50, $3.60; TONI, $4.00, $3.00; FLYING BANNER, $3.30.

CONTINUITY, going forwardly while being steadied behind the leaders until entering the stretch, moved up strongly on the outside and drew out with a rush, but had to be vigorously ridden to maintain her advantage through the stretch. TONI gradually bettered her position rounding the turn, but was forced to go very wide entering the stretch, and finished gamely to outlast FLYING BANNER in the final drive. FLYING BANNER, outrun in the early stages, closed a good gap in the last three furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TATTERDEMALION, $5.60, $3.90, $2.70; RUSHAWAY, $4.50, $3.20; BLACK RIVER, $2.50.

TATTERDEMALION, away forwardly, went in near pursuit of the leaders under slight restraint in opening half mile, slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn and drew out into a commanding lead, winning as his rider pleased. RUSHAWAY, hustled to the front set a rapid early pace, and held on gamely to outlast BLACK RIVER in the final drive. The latter outbroke the field and was immediately taken back, followed the pace under restraint until entering the stretch, then closed with a belated rush.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:00½. LAWRIN took command at once, set a rapid pace throughout and, continuing with determination when the final test came, held BRUSH HOOK safe. BRUSH HOOK, reserved behind the field in the early running, moved up menacingly on the outside when straightened into the stretch, but was unable to overhaul the leader. MAERIEL, moved into contention with a rush while slipping through on the inside in the run down the backstretch, but could not keep pace with the leaders through the stretch. COLUMBIANA showed good speed for six furlongs and then retired. DELLOR quit early and was badly beaten.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:34. WHITE GINGER, rated off the leader until leaving the backstretch, opened up a long lead rounding the lower turn, but Keppler took no chances and rode him out briskly to the finish. INDIAN HEAD, well up all the way, responded gamely to punishment and shook off MOTLEY in the stretch run. MOTLEY, well ridden and saving the most ground, moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but faltered when it came to a drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:04. Winner, S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WALTER MORTON, $5.40, $3.40, $2.70; BOMBER, $4.20, $3.60; KENYON C, $6.70.

WALTER MORTON, quickest to get going, held his opposition safe for speed, was cleverly rated in front while saving ground and held on determinedly in the final drive. BOMBER, going forwardly on the outside under slight restraint in the early stages, made a game effort through the stretch and was wearing the winner down at the end. KENYON C, well up on the inside from the start, continued gamely to outlast MORE PEP through the stretch. MORE PEP, slow to get going, closed a good gap while circling the field in the last half mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:35½. Winner, Egan and Madden's ch. c. (6), by Torchille—Dorothy Dean. Trained by G. Mayberry. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 2:08.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE DEAN, $16.90, $7.30, $4.30; WILLIAM V, $4.40, $3.20; BLIND BROOK, $3.60.

PRINCE DEAN gradually improved his position rounding the far turn, responded gamely to punishment when the real issue came and wore WILLIAM V. down in the closing strides. WILLIAM V., a forward contender, saved much ground entering the stretch and drew out, but then faltered in the last furlong. BLIND BROOK, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the early running, moved up stoutly on the outside midway around the turn, but then was carried out to the furlong pole by SAY WHEN. The latter broke rapidly from outside the stalls, displayed good speed under stout restraint, but began to bear out rounding the lower turn and faltered in the stretch. FAR CRY did not appear partial to the footing and ceased to be a factor in last half mile.

$39.60 Shot Wins At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, Feb. 23 (AP).—Making the first start of his 5-year-old campaign, Mrs. F. S. Harris' Singers Folly came through with a surprise victory in the mile and a sixteenth feature at the Fair Grounds today.

With little to show for his races of the last year, Singers Folly returned $39.60 for $2.

Meets Gino Martinelli Tonight

Gino Martinelli, James In Mat Feature Tonight

Boris Demitroff, Walter Podlack, in Top Supporting Bout; Valdez, Packos Also on Card at Turner's Arena.

Jesse James, the handsome world's light heavyweight wrestling champion, and the equally handsome Gino Martinelli, of Boston, go to the mat at Turner's Arena again tonight, with the Bostonian determined to avenge a previous defeat at the hands of the titleholder.

Martinelli was at a big disadvantage in his losing bout to James. He had to scale down to the 185-pound limit, with James' title at stake, but tonight they have it out at catchweights.

The supporting bouts shape up as follows:

Bronco Valdez, a villainous Mexican champion with lots of wrestling zip, returns for a shot at Nick Packos, a Greek grappler.

First bout is at 8:30.

Eastern Team Captures City's Interhigh Basketball Championship

Tops Western By 39-24 in Final Game

By Jack Munhall.

Rising to the occasion with one of its most brilliant performances of the season, Mike Kelley's veteran Eastern quintet snatched its fourth interhigh basketball title in five years yesterday, whipping the defending champion Western, 39-24, at Tech gym.

Earlier some 1,000 students had watched Roosevelt take the opener of the twin bill from Wilson by a score of 32-25. The victory, coupled with Western's subsequent setback, boosted Roosevelt into sole possession of second place, breaking a deadlock.

For Eastern the surprisingly easy conquest marked the close of its schedule in the series without an actual defeat although a forfeit to Roosevelt accounts for a game on the wrong side of the standings.

May Decide Runner-Up.

Roosevelt and Western meet tomorrow night in a game that probably will decide the runner-up spot, though Western has to play Wilson after that.

Eastern's smooth passing and deadly shooting quickly dispelled any notions of a Western upset for the Northeast lads hustled into a 9-0 lead in the first 4 minutes. Bob Holloran, Western forward, scored the initial 2 points for the Georgetowners but Eastern came right back to take a 11-2 lead at quarter.

In the second period Western settled down and offered stiffer opposition, cutting the imposing margin to 13-7 on baskets by Len Stanton, its huge center and the individual star of the game. But the sharpshooting of Ralph Matera, Lee Lusby and Russ Lombardy sent Eastern far in front at half, 17-10.

Eastern Continues Barrage.

The Eastern barrage continued in the third quarter as the white-clad speedsters ran the count to 30 to 16. Western, realizing its crown was toppling, fought with renewed energy in the final eight minutes and for a time made the ultimate decision a little doubtful.

With Stanton and Holloran flipping in four rapid baskets, the Georgetown five ate into Eastern's lead and reduced it to 32 to 24 before a final Eastern spurt nullified the temporary advantage. The winners tallied the last 7 points of the game in convincing fashion and left no doubt of their superiority.

Matera and Lombardy contributed 10 points each to lead Eastern's attack and Lusby closely followed with 9. However, to Western's tall center, Stanton, go the laurels for the outstanding performer and also the high scorer. Stanton was all over the floor, batting down enemy pases and ramming in timely goals in his losing cause. He made a serious challenge for an all-high selection by limiting Clint Quantrille, the series leading point-getter to six points.

Wilson Team Falters.

Wilson's Presidents at first offered Roosevelt unexpected opposition but weakened in the final half to allow the Riders to win easily. The score at the end of the first quarter favored Wilson, 8 to 7, but that lead was the last it held although the game was fairly even until the final period.

Hymie Perlo, and Jack Smith, Roosevelt's classy pair of February newcomers paced the offense with 10 and 6 points respectively, while Don Findely, with 11, was best for Wilson.

White Bags 69 for Medal At Houston

Bobby Riegel, Former Dixie Champion, Takes Second.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 23.—Slender Ed White, former national intercollegiate champion who had to be persuaded to play because his game had been "sour," carved out a 69 over rain-sodden fairways to take medalist honors in the Houston Country Club Invitation Golf Tournament today.

Businesslike putting gave White, former member of the Walker Cup team, his subpar 33-36—69 round over a deceptive course temporarily a par 35-35—70 because a flooding creek caused shortening by a stroke of a par 4 hole.

A gallant comeback on the last three holes kept Johnny Goodman, national amateur champion, in the tourney. He fairly simmered on the first nine holes with a fine 35, but ran into grief on the first six holes of the home nine. Six over par for 15 holes, Goodman worked hard for pars on the final three holes to squeeze into match play.

White rapped in 6 birdies while scoring the lowest round he ever compiled in a qualifying round, but also allowed 5 bogies to slip on his card. He was 4 under par on the first five holes and seemed headed for 31 on the first nine until he went 1 over on both the seventh and eighth holes.

One shot behind at par 70 was Bobby Riegel, of Beaumont, Tex., former Southern amateur champion and member of the 1936 Walker Cup team. Around the first nine in 34, 1 under par, Riegel played cautiously for his 1 over 36 on the incoming nine.

Two shots back at 73 were Don Schumacher, of Dallas, trans-Mississippi champion; Bill Skeeters, former Southern Methodist football hero and runner-up for the Texas title in 1935, and John Henderson, little-known Lufkin (Tex.) swinger, who carded a disastrous 6, 2 over par, on the eighteenth hole.

Thirteen 77 shooters teed off just before nightfall in a play-off for two places, and darkness settled before three remaining players could decide the matter.

Walter Emery, Houston, runner-up for the national amateur title in 1935 and former Walker Cupper; Lewis Crisman, Houston, and Jack Chambers, Houston, were called off the course and will play for the two open spots early tomorrow.

Bunched at 75's were Johnny Dawson, Chicago; David (Spec) Goldman, Dallas; Edwin McClure, Shreveport, La., defending champion, and Reynolds Smith, Dallas, Walker Cup star, along with seven others.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 23 (AP).—Ed Stolark, of Washington, D. C., shot a 42, 43—85 today in the qualifying round for the Houston Country Club invitation golf tournament.

Brett Joins Rockies.

Danville, Va., Feb. 23.—Herbert Brett, for the past four years pilot of the Danville baseball team in the Bi-State League and who recently resigned, has gone to Rocky Mount, N. C., where he has been named team manager.

Episcopals Win, 21-18

McKinley Tech Defeated at Alexandria.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 23.—Episcopal High School's quintet added another District of Columbia Interhigh League member to its list of victims here this afternoon, nosing out McKinley Tech, 21 to 18, in a fast contest in the new Episcopal gymnasium. It was the Maroons' tenth victory, against five setbacks.

After holding the Washingtonians scoreless in the opening quarter, the Maroons were forced to play at top speed to retain their advantage for the remaining three periods. A potential Tech rally in the late stages was spiked, after the visitors had tied the score midway the third period.

Tech appeared listless during the first eight minutes of play, and when the quarter ended they had failed to score a point, trailing the locals by 9 to 0. They began to find the range in the second quarter, however, and by half-time they had cut the Alexandrians' lead to 11 to 9.

afterward, but Georgetown was on the gallop and goals by Schmitt and Harry Bassin repulsed the final Carnegie bid.

The last few minutes that brought spectators to their feet and players of both teams to the floor was marked by rough play that saw members of both teams hold and shove in fast finish.

Carnegie players presented the fastest passing, accurate shooting team seen in the District this season in the first half, but the Hoyas second half drive nonplussed them into a state of confusion as they gave way to the "umph" the local boys had saved to the last.

In a preliminary game, the Georgetown University freshmen defeated Maryland University freshmen, 43-35.

First Call Sounded For Terp Pitchers

First call for batterymen will be sounded today at College Park, where Coach Burt Shipley will order pitcher and catcher candidates for the 1938 varsity Maryland University baseball team to report to him at the Ritchie Coliseum.

Expected to compete for starting positions as pitchers are: George Wood, Charlie Weidinger and Bill Stiener, veterans from last year's team, and Lefty Springer, and Max Silverman, last year's freshman pitchers. Charlie Norton, although ineligible, will report for practice. He is a fast ball pitcher and would aid the team greatly, should he be reinstated.

Russian Orders Lifts Wheat 2⅛c a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Large-scale Russian military buying of Australian wheat led today to abrupt upturns of wheat quotations, 2¼ cents maximum here and 3⅝ cents at Liverpool.

Russia's wheat purchases were for shipments to Vladivostok, because of large Russian troop concentrations there, the nearest Russian port to Japan. Highest prices of the day in Chicago prevailed as the end of dealings approached, but were then reduced by last-minute profit-taking. Australia was reported to have sold a total of about 70,000 tons of wheat to Vladivostok.

Steel Output Declines to 30% Capacity

Best Prospect for Favorable Market Is in Rail Buying.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—A generally bleak picture of steel industry prospects for the immediate future was given in the Iron Age weekly summary made public today.

In rail equipment alone is there any immediate substantial marketing prospect, the summary said, and that is contingent on a favorable Interstate Commerce Commission ruling on the roads' application for increased rates.

Some of the roads, notably the Santa Fe, Illinois Central, North Western and Rock Island lines have inquired for rails and track accessories, although no orders have been Equipment building made possible through governmental assistance in one form or another offers "the most tangible prospect for the near future" the summary said.

While questions of wages and prices have been shunted aside for the time being as business deterrents, clarification of the price structure, awaited by many buyers, did not produce the road stimulus expected, although a few companies had the best volume of orders in many weeks the trade publication stated.

Steel ingot output was estimated at 30 per cent of capacity for the week, off one point from last week. Increases were reported in only two important districts: Buffalo up 2½ points at 20½ and the Valleys 2 points higher at 30 per cent. The Pittsburgh district is down 1 point, Chicago down ½, Cleveland-Lorain 2, and Wheeling-Weirton down from 62 to 48 per cent.

Some new business originated from automobile companies, but excessive inventories discourage immediate hopes, the review said. However, steel in industry at large is being consumed much faster than produced, which makes a better picture for the future.

Seasonal upturns for building have not yet materialized. Steel scrap has declined 50 cents a ton at Chicago, bringing the Iron Age composite price down to $13.67.

Stock Prices Gain 1 to 3 Points On Sustained Buying Wave

Relaxing of Tension of European Affairs and Investment and Covering Activities Aid the Advance; Bonds Are Generally Higher.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Feb. 23.—Sustained buying swept the stock market today and in the broadest advance of recent sessions leaders added 1 to 3 points or more.

The over-the-holiday change in the complexion of European affairs, interpreted as indicating relaxation of recent tension, served as a spur to constructive forces. Investment demand was in evidence, brokers said, together with a considerable amount of short covering.

The financial community accepted Britain's inauguration of general conversations with Italy as possibly foreshadowing an eventual four-power conference to smooth out troubles separating England, France, Germany and the Fascist Kingdom. At the same time it was noted the French planned further armament accretion, while other nations showed little disposition to slow down war material expenditures.

Volume Increases.

The day's volume, 1,299,315 shares, was the heaviest since January 25, and compared with 758,871 on Monday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 1.1 points to 46.5. Of the 826 issues traded, 628 advanced, 68 declined and 130 were unchanged. Commodities, likestocks, felt the influence of renewed optimism Europe's squabbles were due for alleviation.

Steels, aircrafts, farm implements and the commodity share, rubbers and coppers, were strong from the start in the stock rally. Later rails, utilities and merchandising issues turned active on the upside. Gold mining equities, contrarily, tended lower.

United States Steel Higher.

United States Steel was a leader during the entire session, finishing 2¾ higher, at 57½. Others closing near the top were Bethlehem, 60⅛; Chrysler, 58⅞; Douglass Aircraft, 42; Anaconda, 35¼, International Nickel, 52⅛; United States Rubber, 34½; Westingtonhouse, 100¼; International Harvester, 69¾; duPont, 122⅝; Santa Fe, 39½; Western Union, 27⅛, and Texas Corporation, 44⅝.

Bonds Move Up.

The bond market moved briskly upward today. Leading corporate issues showed gains of 1 to 3 or more.

DANNY FARRAR, southpaw welterweight of the Duke University swing team, has put together a record that can never be surpassed by future Blue Devil boxers . . . Winding up his collegiate boxing career against North Carolina last week, FARRAR closed a career that has consisted of victories in every dual meet . . . He dropped a bout to IVAN NEDOMATSKY, Maryland 145-pounder, last year, however, in the Southern Conference Tournament . . . He's odds-on favorite to win the title at Maryland tomorrow and Saturday . . . SAMMY BAUGH, who has been helping RAY WOLF at the University of North Carolina, thinks he'd laid eyes on two of the finest passers he's seen in the persons of GEORGE STIRNWEISS and JIM LALANNE . . . The Sweetwater Sweetheart calls the Tarheel team "just about the hardest working squad I have ever seen" . . . FRANK DOBSON, football coach at Maryland, was principal speaker of the George Washington University Freshman Club Forum last night . . . He opposed college athletic subsidization . . .

HUGH ROGERS, Citadel's classy heavyweight boxer, who knocked Columbus' JIM BROWN westwinding, Tuesday night, and who will be a favorite to become Southern Conference Champ, is the brother of ORVILLE ROGERS, who won the conference title, last year . . . JOE KILGROW, Alabama's all-American football star, who local fans will remember for his stellar performance against George Washington last fall, will be a baseball candidate at the Capstone this spring. . . . He plays both the outfield and infield . . . Eagerly watching the progress of construction of the District's first sports arena at Third and M streets northwest, is MOE DREISEN, former speed skating champion of Connecticut . . . He makes the trip to Baltimore every Tuesday night to keep in form and was elated to learn the building will follow the style of the Hershey, Pennsylvania arena . . . Which, incidentally is the last word . . . JOE BUNSA, who was lost to the Catholic University boxing team, this season due to an abscessed kidney, is looking forward to next year, when he will form the nucleus for Coach EDDIE LAFOND'S rebuilding campaign. . . . He fights in the 155-pound class.

Doesn't make sense note—They say at George Washington University that JIM PIXLEE will return next fall to supervise the construction of a magnificent athletic field house . . . But, the present Tin Tabernacle that houses a gym and athletic offices is being renovated at considerable expense . . . Draw your own conclusions.

Navy Loses Frank Lynch

Varsity Center Hurt; Bill Ingram Shifted.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Feb. 23.—The Naval Academy basketball team will be without Frank Lynch, varsity center, when it faces the Army Saturday at West Point.

Coach John N. Wilson today selected his line-up, sinding Bill Ingram to center, with Alan McFarland and George Ghesquiere, forwards, and Bob Laney and Jack Mansfield, guards.

Lynch hurt his knee several weeks ago and has been out of the game. He will make the trip with the squad and may see action for a short period in order to qualify for his letter.

The shifted line-up gives Navy two scoring forwards. Ghesquiere was used as an alternate to Lynch early in the season, but was shifted to forward, with Ingram at center, in the second half of the Temple game. During the last home game with Catholic University last week Wilson used the team that will face Army.

It will be the fifteenth clash between the service schools. Navy has won eight of the games and Army 6. Last year Navy won, 42 to 40.

Navy has been haunted by injuries to its best players in Army-Navy games in recent years. In 1935 Fred (Buzz) Borries, one of the academy's greatest players, had influenza and watched the game from the bench, wrapped in blankets.

Table Tennis Draws Schiff

Top-Ranking Player to Compete Here.

Local table tennis received its greatest boost in history last night when it was announced that Sol Schiff, the No. 1 player of the country, would play in the Eastern championships to be held at Heurich's gymnasium Saturday and Sunday.

Schiff's entry climaxes one of the fastest fields ever to enroll for a local paddle tournament and his decision to forego the Western championships scheduled for this weekend at Cleveland, was based largely on the class of the players coming to Washington for the Eastern.

For five other nationally ranking paddlers already had entered the men's singles while the women's tournament has even one more than the men's, seven. Those with national rankings to show here will be Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, No. 11; Jimmy Jacobson, of Yale, No. 14; Melvin Rose, of New York, No. 19; Leslie Lowry, the Massachusetts champion, No. 22, and Manny Moskowitz, New Jersey titleholder, No. 26.

Washington also will see a leading paddler of the fair sex in Emily Fuller, now the No. 2 ranking player, who was one of the first to enter the local tourney.

Other nationally ranked woman stars will be Mae Clouther, the Massachusetts champ, ranked ninth; Mae Spannaus, of New Rochelle, ranked tenth; Clara Harrison, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, ranked thirteenth; Matilda Plaskow, of Philadelphia, ranked eighteenth; Ruth Wilson, Pennsylvania titleholder, ranked twentieth, and Florence Archer, of Upper Darby, Pa., who is ranked twenty-third.

Dutch Bombers Give Batavia Taste of War

Huge Martin Planes, Made in U. S., Roar Over East Indian Capital.

By the United Press.

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Feb. 23.—Gay and picturesque Batavia is learning the grim realism of war from nightly maneuvers of new Martin bombers, to the tune of anti-aircraft guns and the screech of air raid sirens.

Night club revelers turned out for the first of these war drills early this week—when the city was "blacked out," and saw one of the big planes crash, a mile from the airport at Bandoeng. Five airmen were killed in the accident, which occurred during a driving rainstorm.

The accident gave the scene a realistic touch, particularly as the other Dutch fliers did not halt, pressing on their raid while the antiaircraft guns blazed away into the sky.

New in Batavia.

Although "blackouts" are frequent at Singapore and Hongkong, where the British have been educating the populace to war conditions, the air raid alarm is a new phase of night life in Batavia and one that was seized upon in a holiday spirit until the crash at the airfield.

The alarm was sounded shortly before midnight and the raids last about two hours.

Openness of the military air headquarters at Bandoeng is a marked contrast to the secrecy with which Singapore surrounds the new $100,000,000 naval base.

There both fortifications and equipment are closely guarded, and no one is allowed to walk through certain areas. The Dutch, on the contrary, are glad to exhibit their rapidly expanding fortifications, which they regard with national pride.

30 Martin Bombers.

More than 30 Martin bombers are regularly stationed at Bandoeng, about 50 miles inland from Batavia, which lies on the northern coast of Java. The Dutch are ordering 70 additional bombing planes, largely to defend the valuable Borneo oil fields which are scattered over Borneo to the north. Scores of new pilots are going through flying training at Bandoeng.

In the airdome are hugh piles of bombers of various sizes not yet assembled, with cases of machine guns ready for installation, and dozens of smaller pursuit planes.

This week the Dutch plan to begin manufacturing gas masks in a factory here. At present the supply is purchased from Singapore.

Cloudy and Colder To Follow Drizzle

Dreary skies poured an incessant drizzle on Washington yesterday, causing physicians to warn against grippe and common colds.

Today will be cloudy and somewhat colder, with possibly light rain in the forenoon, the Weather Bureau predicted. Official measurement of rainfall up to 6 p. m. yesterday was .81 of an inch. A high reading of 45 degrees was recorded at 4 p. m., and a low of 39 at the previous midnight.

Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina were doused with rain yesterday, and weather officials said showers and dropping temperatures would be general in the three States today.

Cummings' Cold Better.

Attorney General Cummings was reported yesterday to be "recovering slowly" from a cold which has confined him to his home almost a week.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 23.—Renewed buying of securities took place today on the more favorable international political outlook and practically all sections of the list closed higher. Electrical equipments and home rails were very firm and metal issues moved up following the strength in base metals. Steels, tobaccos and liquors were in good demand and rubbers also sold higher. European bonds and dollar-related shares together with the transatlantic group made substantial advances.

Paris.—The tone in the bourse continued firm with a general all round advance in prices. Suez Canal moved up more than 500 francs and Royal Dutch was 100 higher. Rentes moved irregularly and closed 15 centimes lower to 30 higher.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures moved up 1½d to 1½d on heavy buying by Russia and Australia and a better demand for manitobas. Scattered buying in cotton futures and firm eastern markets, together with signs of improvement in textiles prices influenced traders and quotations finished 3 to 4 points up.

I have found that the older people get, the plainer they talk. I blush when I think of some of the articles I use'ta write on the Press-Argus back home when I was a boy. I was just tryin' to show off with a lot'a big words.

One time when we had a flood back there, I wrote "The Storm King hurled his torn and tumbled torrent over the ruins of the broken and dismembered edifice." Today I would just simply say—"The flood washed away Bill Spradley's barn."

9 High Officers Of Army Slated For Promotion

Roosevelt Recommends Three as Chiefs of Service Branches.

Recommended to be chiefs of branches of the Army with rank of major general were Col. Robert M. Danford, chief of staff of the Sixth Corps Area, Chicago, who was nominated for the post of chief of Field Artillery, succeeding Maj. Gen. Upton Birnie, whose term expires next month.

Col. John K. Herr, now commanding the Seventh Cavalry, Fort Bliss, Texas, to be chief of Cavalry, succeeding Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, who also reaches the end of his term in March.

Col. Emory S. Adams, adjutant general of the Fourth Corps Area, Atlanta, to succeed Maj. Gen. Edgar T. Conley, as adjutant general of the Army. Gen. Conley is retiring from active duty on April 30.

Two Major Generals.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated two officers to be major generals of the line.

They are Brig. Gen. James A. Woodruff, commanding the Hawaiian Coast Artillery Brigade, Fort DeRussey, Hawaii, to succeed Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, who retires next week.

Brig. Gen. Frank L. Rowell, commanding Atlantic Center, Panama Canal, Fort DeLesseps, Canal Zone, as successor to Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, who is retiring March 31.

Officers nominated to be brigadier generals of the line were:

Col. Joseph M. Cummings, of the Army War College here, succeeding Brig. Gen. Louis M. Nuttman, who retired last month.

Woodruff to Be Promoted.

Col. Richard C. Moore, commanding the Second Engineers, Fort Logan, Colo., to succeed Brig. Gen. James A. Woodruff, who is to be promoted.

Col. Karl Truesdell, commanding the Sixteenth Infantry, Fort Jay, N. Y., as successor to Brig. Gen. Frank M. Howell.

Col. Fulton Q. C. Gardner, of the Seventh Coast Artillery, Fort Hancock, N. J., succeeding Brig. Gen. Manus McCloskey, who retires in April.

The War Department also announced transfer of Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, now commanding the Second Division with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., to command of the Third Corps Area, Baltimore. He will succeed Maj. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, who has been transferred to command of the Ninth Corps Area, San Francisco.

All the officers have brilliant records in the service of the Nation in time of war and peace.

Served in Washington.

A native of Montana, Gen. Woodruff was appointed to West Point from Vermont. He graduated in 1899 and was commissioned in the Engineer Corps. He saw service in the Philippines, and then became an instructor of civil and military engineering at West Point. Later he served on engineering work at Vicksburg, Miss., and in the office of the Chief of Engineers, in Washington.

During the World War Gen. Woodruff organized and commanded the Tenth Engineers in France. Later he was put in charge of forestry work in France. The war over, he was made commandant of the Engineer School, and later director of the Command and General Staff School. In 1935 he was made a brigadier, and put in charge of the Port of Embarkation at San Francisco. For the past year he has been on duty in Hawaii.

The military career of Gen. Rowell, a native of Idaho, began with his appointment as second lieutenant of infantry during the War with Spain. He saw active duty in Cuba, the Philippines, China and with Gen. Pershing's expedition into Mexico in 1916. During the World War he served in France and later with the War Department General Staff. He was made a brigadier in 1935 and placed in command of the Eighteenth Brigade at Boston. Since March, 1936, he has been stationed in the Canal Zone.

Had War Duty Here.

Col. Danford was born in New Boston, Ill., and graduated from West Point in 1904. He was immediately commissioned in the artillery, and during the World War was on duty with the Office of the Chief of Field Artillery in Washington. Later he commanded the Field Artillery Replacement Depot at Camp Jackson, S. C. He was Commandant of Cadets at West Point from 1919 to 1923 and later served as executive officer for the Chief of Field Artillery.

Col. Herr, a native of New Jersey, was graduated from West Point in 1902 and commissioned in the Seventh Cavalry, the regiment he now commands. He served for a time with the Nineteenth British Division in the World War, and then was transferred to the general staff of the Thirtieth Division. He participated with distinction in the Ypres-Lys and Somme offensives, and was on the general staff of the Army of Occupation in Germany.

A Kansan by birth, Col. Adams began his Army career as an enlisted man in the Twentieth Kansas Infantry in the War With Spain. He fourth in numerous engagements in the Philippines, and was promoted from the ranks for exceptional valor and efficiency in 1902. During the World War he served in France. Since then he has been on duty at various Army headquarters throughout the United States.

On War College Faculty.

Commissioned to the Army from civil life in 1903, Col. Cummins, a native of St. Louis, served in posts throughout the country. During the World War he went to France as machine gun officer of the Seventh Division. After the war he was on duty with the Fifteenth Infantry in China, with the War Department general staff, and since 1936 has been on the faculty of the Army War College.

Born in Missouri, Col. Moore was graduated from West Point in 1903, and subsequently served in France with the 318th Engineers and the department of construction and forestry of the A. E. F. After the war he served on a special mission to Peru and was also engaged in rivers and harbors work. Recently he has been on duty at Fort Logan, Colo.

A native of Minnesota, Col. Truesdale was commissioned from the ranks of the Regular Army in 1904. During the World War he served in the office of the Chief Signal Officer in France, and later was executive officer of the Fifteenth Infantry in China. Returning from China he taught at the Army War College, and last year was transferred to Fort Jay.

Chosen for Promotion by President

Labor Bureau Fails to Settle Grocery Strike

Another American Store Closed as Deadlock Continues.

Striking clerks and butchers were deadlocked last night with officials of the American Stores Co., retail grocery chain, in spite of attempted settlement by the Department of Labor.

Another store was closed yesterday, raising to 14 the number closed in two days. The company said the stores would be closed permanently unless strikers accept a compromise wage agreement.

Howard T. Colvin, conciliator of the Labor Department, brought together yesterday officials of the company and of the Retail Clerks Union and Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, American Federation of Labor affiliates, but little progress was reported.

Robert T. Castles, general superintendent of the company, which operates 46 stores in the metropolitan area, said that the company had no choice but to keep closed permanently the stores unless workers would accept a compromise wage scale the company could afford to pay.

R. M. Coulter, union spokesman, said last night that the compromise offered by the company was not to the union's liking, and the chances for quick settlement of the two-day-old strike did not look bright. They seek a weekly minimum of $21.

Judges Work Hard, Senate Unit Is Told

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, and Bolitha J. Laws, president of the District Bar Association, both defended the justices.

The hearing was on a bill which proposes to add three justices to the United States District Court in the District.

Laws told the sub-committee two members of Congress appointed to the United States District Court some time ago tried to lengthen the sessions, but found they did not have time left to draft opinions.

Parley Discusses Housing Payment

District officials and representatives of the new United States Housing Authority yesterday met to discuss what payments, if any, should be made to the District for the Langston Terrace housing project, near Benning road and Twenty-fifth street northeast.

The new low-cost project built exclusively for colored tenants, was started by the PWA, but was taken over by the new Housing Authority.

Although Government property cannot be taxed by the District, the Government, in lieu of police and fire protection, sewage disposal and other District services, may fix and pay an annual lump sum to the District.

A SUPPLEMENT OF

Fashion

A SELECTED ARRAY OF SPRING FASHIONS FOR WASHINGTON

Smart Accent For Navy

Over-the-shoulder bag by Koret, with convenient outside pocket. The long handle may be worn full-length or knotted smartly at top. Alluring new colors to contrast with dark costumes are roseberry, corn-flower blue, hide-tan, chaudron; also black and deep blue.

A red and silver African daisy by Monet, to feminize your spring tailleur! Bolero hat, fur scarf and monogrammed bag are other tremendous trifles toward chic.

The Veiled Sailor

Every wardrobe this spring should have at least one sailor hat; it's a fashion dictum. This one, by Harryson, is made of black luzon straw with flowing grosgrain ribbon bow and band, and feminized by a long mesh veil. Ideal to accompany both tailored suits and softly styled frocks; an ageless sailor, universally becoming.

The Gibson Girl Coat

An old friend in a new guise, the T-shaped silhouette of "bicycle days" influence, fashioned of botany velvedeau, a luscious smooth fabric with suede finish. An important spring style trend. Note tiny collar, high button treatment, and slot pockets. A distinctive general wear coat, ageless in styling, designed by Vera Maxwell.

Cape Tops Suit

The new bolero shoulder cape of light camel hair, by Jaeger, to complement the tailored suit or simple daytime frock. In this case, it tops a suit of black wool, whose collarless jacket buttons down the entire front. A clever trick to give an otherwise tailored outfit the popular feminine and sentimental touch!

PRINTS

Dots Invade Mode

Bayadere Sripes Popular

An alternating flower and chain design in cathedral colors on a black background gives distinction to this V-neckline silk frock with sash of self-material; suitable to wear now and on through spring and summer. The black chin-strap initial hat of felt, after Agnes, could accompany many costumes with style assurance.

Black and White

Broad horizontal stripes in stylized flower design give this front-zippered frock of pique an air of individuality. A print which lends itself ideally to numerous accessory themes. Processed against shrinkage, the fine pique will withstand numerous trips to the tub and retain its original dimensions and clear colors.

Numerous Perky Bows

A tiny flat sailor of green Bangkok straw, trimmed with soft-toned multi-colored ribbon bows—the trimming continuing into either a tie under the chin or a bandeau at the back of the head; designed by Lilly Dache. This amusingly smart hat could complement mid-season suits or frocks, or sheer cottons next summer, with equal chic.

Deep Rich Colors

An unusual one-piec. frock of spun rayon with a soft challis texture in deep red, navy and green; a smart and practical general wear costume. Note front fullness of high neckline, fitted bodice, and low stitched front pleats of skirt. Accessories may be chosen in any of the strong colors of frock. Simple brimmed hat with streamers in back, by Louisesanders.

Step Out in a Trim Tailleur
